

New DRESSES for Old Dorothy

There's one way to save up silver and gold. And that is to get some new dresses for old Dorothy. Dorothy is the name of the money for clothes when you get acquainted with Dorothy's manner of "keeping her wardrobe up to the mark." If a dress isn't in style she alters it and has it cleaned by us. Sometimes she buys a new hat to match it and sometimes she retires an old one. And dyeing disguises some of Dorothy's last year frocks, but who'd know it.

RECOGNITION.

The care of the teeth is now recognized as a necessity. In fact the large hospitals all over the world examine the patients' teeth and where it is possible put them in good condition before attempting a surgical operation. Experience has shown that the patient has a better chance for recovery with a clean healthy mouth than without it. This ought to convince the most skeptical that care of the teeth is requisite to health.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

A DANGEROUS WOMAN.

A woman I know, let's call her Mrs. S. B. is a perfect example of what I call the dangerous woman type. But do not at once feel that you need to herd your husbands under your wing should you happen to meet her, you married Reader Friends, for I do not mean that kind of a dangerous woman.

I think Mrs. S. B. is more dangerous than the deliberate home wrecker. Or rather I think she does more harm because the home wrecker can only operate on one home at a time whereas Mrs. S. B.'s type can be making trouble for several homes at once. To be sure the trouble she makes is not always as serious as the trouble the other sort of dangerous woman causes, but sometimes it is, and it certainly makes up in quantity for anything it lacks in quality.

Like That Well Known "Ill Wind."

This is what Mrs. S. B. does. She gets people to say indiscreet things, and then, like that well known "ill wind that blows nobody good," she delicately wafts those indiscreet things in whatever direction they will stir up the most excitement and probably do the most harm.

Here is an example of her activities. She gets hold of a young girl to whom an older married man has been very kind because her desire for a musical career interested him and because she appeared to his desire to help people. She insinuates to the girl that the man is deeply interested in her, teases her about the kind things he has done for her, and finally flatters her into admitting that he does seem to like her pretty well.

Short and Sweet.

Correspondence Which is Brief and Bright and Breezy.
Fred Karno, who had a fatherly interest in the youthful and still quite unknown Charlie Chaplin, but nothing in the way of work for him at the moment, sent him to Fred Kitchen with the following note: "Dear Kitchen—Can you do anything with this young man—Karno?"
A fortnight later Charlie turned up again in the Karno camp with the reply: "No; no good. Keep him—Kitchen."

Even Lord Reading will not be able to beat the brevity or point of the shortest vice-regal note on record. A native prince had been taking liberties of a perfectly innocent nature with a royal coat of arms. The Himpets of Government House were wrath, and laid before Lord Minto, the Viceroy, a stack of papers relating to this case. Lord Minto wrote on the top page: "Drop it—M." It was dropped like a hot brick.

No Waste Words.
School teachers sometimes receive very charming and brief epistles. Perhaps the prize would be taken by the parent who wrote: "Please excuse my boy a-scratching of himself to-day, but he's got a new flannel shirt on."

A Manchester man wrote a letter to a Liverpool friend and addressed it: "Mr., Alburgh Road, Liverpool, near Manchester." A few days later the letter was returned in a Lost Letter Office envelope, with the old address cancelled, and in blue lead the endorsement: "Manchester not known."

When Sir David Brewster, the inventor of that pretty toy, the kaleidoscope, was a young unmarried man, he wrote to his sweetheart, "Dear B.—You be Home, I be—D.B." During the first Presidency of the late Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. Taft disagreed with him on some subject, and wrote resigning his portfolio in the Roosevelt Cabinet. His answer, scribbled across the top of his own long letter reached him within an hour. It was: "Dear Bill—Piddledoodle—T.R."

During the discussion on the shorter hours of opening public houses, a contributor wrote to a well-known editor asking if he might write an article on certain aspects of the liquor traffic. The reply came, short and sweet: "Dear Sir. No pubs. Yours truly."

Won't It?
Another would-be contributor to a comic paper sent a humorous paragraph for insertion. Not getting any reply, or seeing it in print, he presently wrote: "I sent you a joke about ten days ago. I have heard nothing respecting its safe receipt, and should be glad to hear whether you have seen it."

The editor's reply was as follows: "Your joke arrived safely, but up to the present we have not seen it." A lovesick young man wrote to the editor of a certain weekly confessing that he was in love with the most beautiful girl in the world, and asking advice as to how he should pop the question. Back came the answer: "It's like ginger-beer; if it doesn't pop itself there's something wrong with it."

For brevity it would be impossible to beat the correspondence between Victor Hugo and his publisher some time after the first issue of "Les Misérables." Very busy, but anxious to know how the book was going, Hugo sent the publisher a card marked simply: "77." The reply came back "11."

Mr. E. V. Lucas describes the following as a "model":
Mr. Rogers (to Lady Dufferin): "Will you dine with me on Wednesday?"
Lady Dufferin (to Mr. Rogers): "Won't it?"—Answers.

Tiger Attacks Trainer.

A trainer's fight for life with six infuriated tigers thrilled and horrified the audience at a performance of Hagenbeck's circus in Berlin on Friday night. For some reason Fischer, the trainer, was unable to persuade the beasts to go through their act, even though he tempted them with juicy pieces of meat. He turned his back for a moment, and one tiger leaped on him and dragged him to the ground. Many women in the audience fainted, while the attendants who had rushed into the cage were beating the tigers off Fischer. He was taken to hospital terribly mauled.
