K. of C. Convention

The fifth State Convention of the Knights of Columbus opened at Bell Island on Empire Day at 10 a.m. Messages of good will and respect were forwarded his Grace the Archbishop, his Lordship Bishop March and his Lordship Bishop Renouf. A telegram was forwarded to his Excellency the Governor expressing loyalty to his Majesty the King. Answers to these messages were received before the close of the Convention.

The irreparable loss sustained by the death of Rev. Dr. Whalen was enlarged upon. He was referred to as the pioneer of Columbianism in Newfoundland. Past State Deputy Ellis spoke of a striking instance of his popularity and force of character when at the last Supreme Convention of the Knights at Montreal, news of his death arrived. The entire assemblage knelt and prayer was offered for the repose of his soul. The following State officers were elected for the ensuing year:

State Deputy—Bro. W. T. Jones,
State Secretary—Bro. J. G. Higgins.

State Treasurer—Bro. W. S. Madigan.
State Advocate—Bro. W. H. Kennedy.

State Warden—Bro. A. G. Duggan. Bro. Dr. Gleaneth, G.K. of Conception Council was elected alternate to the State Deputy at the Supreme Convention, and Bro. M. J. Nugent, G.K. of Notre Dame Council alternate to the Past State Deputy. At the close of the Convention the State officers and delegates were the guests of Conception Council at a banquet in their club rooms.

A Popular Service

The steam yacht Pawnee arrived at Portugal Cove at 9.15 a.m. yesterday from Carbonear and Harbor Grace, via Bell Island, bringing twelve passengers from across the Bay and fifteen from Bell Island. The Pawnee is fitted up in first-class condition, and last summer had a new boiler installed. She has a speed of from twelve to fifteen knots. Passengers leaving across the Bay at 7.30 arrive at St. John's at 9.45, and can transact all their business and return home the same afternoon. Quite a number of people are taking advantage of the pleasant run across Conception Bay, and no doubt the service will be very popular during the summer months.

SPENDING MONEY.

VALT MASON

"Spend money nobly, like a king," exclaims a gifted writer; manner is a "tightwad" thing that stamps one as a blither. Spend money bravely, like a lord, as though the coins were cheaper than a dead leaves falling on the sward, while cold winds drift them deeper." And that's the way I spend the scads; in regal style. I blow them; on soda squirts and kindred lads I lavishly bestow them. But first I journey to the bank and put some coins in pickle, for I have grown to be a crank on saving dime and nickel. I take the bulk of what I earn, and put it in cold storage, that I, if luck should have a turn, may have my helpful porridge. And then I join the gilded gens who'd paint the village scarlet, and like a prince blow fifty cents—I am no cheap-john varlet. With royal airs I am endowed, a kingly taste I nourish; I order root beer for the crowd and pay up with a flourish. I blow the pennies left and right, I dissipate the plunder, I make the people of the night look on my curve with wonder. But first I journey to the vault that has my wad in keeping, and put some kopecks down in salt, that I may not be weeping and pawing at the poorhouse door when I am old and stricken; that I may live forevermore on goulash, pie and chicken.

EXTRAS.

When you're building your house take a warning from me—Don't alter or change anything that you see! When once you're agreed on the cost on the place, Go out of the city and don't show your face To the mason, the plumber, the carpenter's crew. For the things they call "extras" will paralyze you.

Should you say: "Put a hook here to hang up my hat," You'll find as an "extra" they're charged you for that. Should by chance you remark to the boss: "Do you think?" The gas range should stand where you're putting the sink. He will say with a smile: "That's a very good change." But that's twelve dollars "extra" for moving the range.

Should you fancy white paint where you've ordered it blue, Rightly gladly they'll smear on the white stuff for you; But they're somewhere in hiding a man who keeps hooks And counts up the nails and the bolts and the hooks. And seeking white paint where the plan called for blue. He puts down an "extra" and bills it to you.

That man is a marvel. He eats not, nor sleeps. So strict an account of your orders he keeps. Should you change but the type of the hinge on a door, That goes down as an "extra" and costs so much more. So when building a house alter nothing you see. And beware of these "extras" which bankrupted me.

Minard's is excellent for chapped hands and all skin diseases.

has disappeared. It had been hoped that the conferees of the U.S. Senate and House might be able to come to some arrangement whereby the exclusion clause could be removed from the bill, but officials here now see no further hope for such an outcome.

Reports that President Coolidge has admitted that he is in favor are not credited in Government circles there as official despatches to the Foreign office from the embassy in Washington have reported that the President has never changed his attitude. Of the two courses which now present themselves, exclusion by legislation or enforcement of the same measure by the conclusion of an agreement with Japan, the latter course, according to officials here, would be the least harmful to the future relations of the two countries. Japanese officials believe that public opinion would prefer that the measure be applied by agreement, as such action would seem to be less arbitrary, although it would have the disadvantage of placing the Japanese Government in an awkward position if it yielded to the American proposal.

With practically all hope of a satisfactory settlement of the long-disputed question gone, officials admitted it had long been felt that the question would some day lead to just such an outcome, and they seemed prepared to accept the inevitable. While the immigration continues to dominate every other question, although the general elections are scheduled for shortly, public opinion remains composed. But the uneasiness which prevails under the surface, which speculates on the consequences which might result from the exclusion clause becoming law.

Indian Time Recorder

A sort of primitive sun-dial was sometimes set up by a Bellaacoola Indian traveller to record, for the benefit of those following him, the time which had elapsed since he had left. This was used only where one followed another, not as a true sun-dial to tell the time of day. The Carrier Indians and the Chilootin Indians also used it.

This time recorder consisted of a twig made into a circular hoop about six inches in diameter, by twisting the ends together, and fastened firmly by a slanting stick stuck up in the smooth earth. The Bellaacoola, who so commonly travelled up and down the Bella Coola river, frequently put one of these upon the sandy river beach. The more or less circular shadow of the hoop was marked in the soil, and the distance that it had travelled from the mark indicated how long the recorder had been standing.

If the one following was travelling in a river canoe and saw that the shadow was near the mark, his canoe party might pole hard in an effort to catch up, but if the shadow were far away he knew that it was probably useless to try to overtake the one ahead.

Escapes Gallows at Last Minute

DAGENAIS SAVED BY PAL-CON-DEMNED TO LIFE IMPRISONMENT.

Alfred Dagenais, condemned murderer, who escaped the gallows when his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, owes his life to Edouard Frellier, his companion, who must pay the penalty to-morrow morning. Both men were found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Arthur Bergeron, a woman over 50 years of age, who was strangled to death for a sum of money estimated at $9.

Frellier, from the beginning of the case, told Dagenais not to be afraid and to do as he would tell him. Dagenais insisted on standing trial with Frellier who opposed a joint appearance. Frellier took the same stand as Dagenais' lawyer, Leonce Plante, who told the prisoner that Frellier was right.

Frellier, advised his companion to face the jury alone but his advice had the opposite effect on Dagenais who believed that he could be of assistance and refused to back down. He told Mr. Plante that he was not going to desert his "pal," even though it paved the way for his acquittal.

When the jury returned a verdict of guilty for both prisoners and the sentence had been pronounced by Mr. Justice Wilson, Frellier, on his way down the winding stairway from the court dock to the cell, gave Dagenais a piece of his mind.

"I told you all along," he was heard to say "not to go in the dock with me. You were a fool not to stand your trial alone."

In the death cell Frellier repeatedly told the guards that Dagenais knew nothing of the plot to rob and kill Mrs. Bergeron.
