The Dresses at Ascot. DON, June 20.—The chief attraction to is, of course, not the racing, but the dressing. Looked at in a broad way, the dreasing. Looked at in a broad way, there were many toulards worn and a great many deep pink gowns, but as a rule the thinner silks were all shot-green and red, worn with a deep frill of lace around the noulders.

The hat was usually of black straw as to be crown, and by way of brim a box-laited lace frill, with a bunch of cherries and black ribbon seemed to find their Jet and black ribbon seemed to find their way on to pretty nearly every third gown. Silue and pink often blended weil together in the same dress. Striking solored bodices having blue silk sleeves and skirts with much blue silk in them were worn with white hats trimmed with huge bows of pink sik.

Parasols were nearly all large and trimmed either with continuous flounces overlapping each other or ruches and chifton. Some were made of rainbowtinged chifton or silt; and some with a dearker tone of shaded silk, while many had controldered frillings at the odge.

The dressing this year, like the attendance, was more magnificent than ever before known in the history of Ascob.

A Pernost rouse Order.

A Prepost rous Order.

London, June 20.—It is no mere coin cidence that on the same day that Gladcidence that on the same day that clade tone announced the Ministry's decision not to proclaim a meneral holiday on the date of the royal mardage the Queen should issue a mandate that everybody at the wedding must wear drawing-room dress, which will compel all the vedding procession to go in indeased carriags. This preposterous order will not only estail hours of physical dissements in the brilling weather on the titled participants of the eremony, but will knock endwise all the public plans for withessing a gorgeous street pageant, which the London populaces of dearly prizes. This exhibition of royal temper is quite in keeping with what has been said lately about the Queen's mental state, and other and more obvious samples of it will probably follow. If she is sortly obstinate some of her subjects can make her as her own game. In a half dozen towns, headed, of course, by Radieal shoemaking North-ampton, meetings convened by the mayors to decide upon a municipal present to Princess May have have been captured by the malcontents and resolutions denouncing these cadging practices have been passed with enthurisatic upcar. Even the orthodox Tory papers have felt obliged to deplore the menstrous lengths to which this present-begging epidemic has been carried.

London, June 19 .- Mr. Labouchere peech to the Northampton Radical Assoiation was one of the bitterest and spiciest he ever delivered. He began by alluding to he were delivered, He began by alluding to his bilts abolishing the House of Lords, which the Radicals of the country indorsed. Within the last few days, he said, certain birthday honors had been distributed. He himself had not been offered even a knighthood. (Laughter.) He found that Sir Hussey Vivian had been made a geer. He was a decent, respectable gantleman, but was he endowed with such sucremon windom that for generation gentleman, but was he endowed with such subminious wisdom that for generation they were to have his progeny to legislate for them? (Hear, hear.) it seemed to the speaker that after the Liberal party had passed his resolution they ought not to make any persons peers. There was only one scheme of making peers that he could assent to, and that was to make at one 600 peers piedged to vote the abolition of the House of Lords immediately upon going there. (Laughter and cheers.) Is was useless to sow wheat and reap it and stack it in the barn if they had a lot of herediary incendiaries who had the right to step into the barn and burn the wheat. That was what the House of Lords was. (Cheers.) One of his (Larbandard was.) had the right to step into the barn and burn the wheat. That was what the House of Lords was. (Cheers.) One of his (Laboucherés) bills would prevent a peer holding any important department of Government, because all important Ministers should hold seats in the House of Commons. When the Liberals came into power they found a large namber of Tory peers getting big salaries. Talk about bribery and cerruption; he knew no assembly in the world more corrupt, more dependent on bribes, than the House of Lords. Referring next to the position of the Liberal party in the House of Commons, he said that at the present moment they were doing absolutely nothing. They had got the Home Rule Bill before them, but Mr. Ballour had declared that he was in favor of every single amendment that would destroy it; Mr. Plunket said he would vote for every amendment that rendered the bill detestable; and their friend Joe Chamberlain—(laughter and hisses)—was prancing all round the place, talking thirteen to the dozen upon every amendment the treatied too seriously. He would not realize the highity of their opponents, and he threw his pearls before these swine. (Laughter, Labouchere had not the slightest objection to the Dike of York marrying the Princess May, but they were not geing to provide for them. (Cheers.) En shought that a wealthy grandmother and a wealthy father might provide for their children. Royal Family Jar.

LONDON, June 20.—The interest of the ourt circle is complecely absorbed at presoutr circle is complecely absorbed as present in the quarrel between the Queen and Princess of Wales over the marriage of the Duke of York. When the match was first mooted the Princess stipulated that nothing should be decided without her assent. The Princess now upbraids the Queen and the Prince of Wales for definitely arranging the match without her knowledge while she was absent on the continent. In an interview with the Queen at Balmoral the Princess, while persisting in her aversion to the match, was persuaded to withdraw her active opposition, though she declined to promise to attend the wedding. The Queen, to emphasize her approval of the match, will give the Duchess of Teck, the mother of the bride, the temporary occupancy of a part of Buckingham Palace before the date of the wedding and a place in the royal carriage while driving to the Chapel Royal to attend the ceremony. ent in the quarrel between the Queen and

An English Hay Famine. London, June 20.—In London the omnious companies are wondering what the shall do for fodder. The price of hay is rising by leaps and bounds. It is already 50 per cent. higher than last year or the year before. One 'bus company has sent an agent to Australia with power to purchase up to £25,000. Speculations have been opened on a big scale in foreign hay, and large purchases have been made in the United States, Canada, and even Russia. Nor is agriculture the only thing affected. The Lancet points out the danger of this drought, saying that it will probably lead to an unusual amount of sickness. But this is only the gloomy side of the picture. The bright side has to do with the approaching royal wedding. Trades men and manufacturers all report an excellent season, for the fine weather lends itself to new gowns and the lavish spending shall do for fodder. The price of hay is cellent season, for the fine weather indus-itself to new gowns and the lavish spending of money in this direction.

his address to the jury. Ex-Governer Robinson concluded his address in the afternoon. His manner and his marshaling of the facts as the defense saw them proved disappointing. In closing he said:
"Gentlemen, as you look upon her you will pass your judgment that she is not insane. During all these days have you seen anything that shows the lack of womanly feeling or womanly bearing? If you make a mistake in this case against the commonwealth, that is something you can correct; if you make a mistake beyond all remedy—a mistake so deplorable that tongue can never tell its wickedness. This commonwealth will be little worth preserving, as the orier of this court asks every day, if such a mistake is made and is to be followed by others equally as deplorable. She is not without sympathy in this world. Gentlemen, take care of her as you have, and at the end let her go back to that bloodstained and wrecked home where she has passed so many years of her life."

The Great Convention

Intense Enthusiasm Permeating the Atmosphere at Ottawa.

Mr. Laurier Opens the New Liberal Club Rooms.

Sir Oliver Mowat Warmly Received eches by Preminent Liberals— Delegates Arriving.

(Special to the ADVERTISER.)

OTTAWA, June 19.—Intense enthusiasm in the Liberal cause, unwavering confidence in and loyalty to the great Liberal leader, and a sure conviction of a great triumph at the next general election permeate the very atmosphere of all the hotels and halls at which the Liberal delegates are to be found. Only a small portion of the hosts expected have yet arrived, but the streets seem to be filled with them and they swarm in the corridors of the hotels and lodging houses, and everywhere are to be met the cheerful look and the abiding hope of coming victory. All the leading men are here or are on the way. The Premiers of tour Provinces are already on hand, while men whose names are household words all over the Dominion are present in almost bewildering numbers. (Special to the ADVERTISER.)

while men whose names are household words all over the Dominion are present in almost bewildering numbers.

SIR OLIVER MOWAT, the veteran Premier of Ontario, arrived this evening and met with a reception second in enthusiasm only to that tendered Mr. Laurier. The enthusiastic welcome tendered the talented leader of the Liberals in the Dominion Parliament to-day fitly opened the proceedings of this greatest week in the history of the Reform party in Canada for the past decade. The opening of the Ottawa club rooms to-night with equal appropriateness gave evidence of the new spirit of aggressive determination that animates the party. Ottawa has long been regarded as a city wedded to its idols, hopelessly given un to the ways of Toryism, but recent events prove the falsity of these ideas. A Liberal association was formed here a few months ago, composed of several hundred staunch adherents of the party, and a couple of weeks ago a Reform club was organized, which has already obtained a most gratifying membership. This club has rented and furnished a suit of rooms in the heart of the city that are a credit to Ottawa and to the Liberal party, and they to-day received the warmest encomiums of scores of visitors from other places.

OPENING OF THE OTTAWA LIBERAL CLUB

Opportunity was taken of the presence here of Hon. Wilfild Laurier to ask him to ormally open the rooms, which he did in the presence of several hundred local Lib formally open the rooms, which he did in the presence of several hundred local Liberals and delegates from all parts of the Dominion. His address, though brief, struck an accordant note in every breast, and as he spoke of the awakening of the country from its long nightmare of corruption and misrule, and of the sure and glorious victory that awaited the Liberal party at the next elections, mighty cheers burst forth—cheers that formed the ample justification of his glowing predictions. Sir Oliver Mowat was also present and made a speech of rare felicity. "Venerable" one feels like calling him when his age is spoken of, but, as Mr. Laurier said, he is still young in heart and full of life and enthusiaem. His short address was cheered to the echo. Ho, too, spoke of the SIONS OF THE TIMES that could not be misread, and added his hat could not be misread, and added hi that could not be misread, and added his assurance also to the promise of coming triumph. He referred in a humorous manner to the political faith of Ottawa, saying that he had good reason to believe this city was sound to the core, as it returned him a supporter by a majority of 1,500.

From away down by the sea and from the far distant west came also the measure of

The rink is handsomely decorated with a protusion of flags and bunting, and all around the sides are banners and streamers with mottoes in English and in French, together with shields bearing the arms of the Provinces and the chief cities, and hangers bearing the names of Papineau, Baldwin, Lafontaine, Dorion, Brown, Mackenzie and other tribunes of the people whose names are famous in Canada's history. The following are some of the mottoes: "McKinley Bowellism won't do." "The tariff is a tax," "Abolish all restraints upon trade," "Foster's tariff must go," "The Tory tariff oppresses the farmer," "We are loyal to Canada's Queen, but we owe no allegiance to monopolists," "God bless our Dominion," b "Protection is a national folly and a national crime," "Repeal the franchise iniquity," "The Conadian edition of the McKinley tariff must be abolished." On the right hand are the following: "Canada's resources are illimitable, an unwise administration alone retards her progress," "Canada before all," "We are loyal to Canada and the Queen, but not to monopolists," "Protection is legalized robbery," "Canada and the Pocple," "Laurier our leader," "One man one vote," "God bless our country," "Reform the Senate," "Liberty for commerce," "Above all I am a Canadian," "Let us get as close to free trade as the necessities of revenue will permit."

Another notable delegate to the convention, who came to Ottawa to-day, is Mr-Louis J. A. Papineau, of Montebello, on the River Ottawa, son of the great Papineau, who was the William Lyon Mackenzie of Quebee.

Hon. Mr. Watson, a member of the Manitoba Government, who is a delegate, prophecies that Manitoba will, at next general election, send five Liberals to support Mr. Laurier.

In his speech at Monday night's reception to the Liberal chieftain, Attorney-General Longley, of Nova Sootia, said Liberalism was progressing in the Lower Provinces. Men were coming into their ranks from among their opponents. In the county of Inverness, Nova Scotia, the Liberals had just nominated for their candidate for the House of Commona a gentleman who had taken an active part against them at the left election and be brought with him a taken an active part against them at the last election, and he brought with him a large section and promised to redeem the county. Delegates Pouring In.

Ottawa, June 20.—That the delegates have loceived a warm welcome to Ottawa is a fact, the literal truth of which can be borne testimony to by every Liberal in the city, for a hotter, more anltry day could scarcely be imagined, and the Maritime delegates especially are longing for a relief to the cool sea breezes to temper the sweltering heat of this place.

All night and all dey delegates have been pouring into the city, until the side-walks are almost impassable with pedestrians, and they awarm as thick as flies in the Parliament buildings, in the museum, and wherever there is anything worth seeing. The numbers present already exceed the mast sanguine expectations. There must be fully 1,500 now in the city, and as many of them brought their wives; the total number of visitors cannot be short of 2,000. The hotel men are at their wite' end to provide accommodation, and all the boarding houses in the city are homely been prought into requisition. As is to be expected, the Liberal leaders are delighted with the prospects of a magnificent success, which now is assured.

The leaders are all here. Laurier, Cartweight, Mowat, Longley, Davies, Charlton, Paterson, Fielding, Watson, Cameron, Tarte, and scores of other stauneb old war horses that for the past decade, have fought the battles of Liberalism are here, jublians with this spontaneous expression of the awakened conscience of the country and of assured victory when the centest shall come.

Mr. Gladstone has made a present to the new Hawarden Institute of fifty volumes of books, including a complete edition of Sir. Walter Scott's works. On the first pages of one volume the donor has written: "No local library should be without a set of Scott's novels in full, accordingly I present this set to the Hawarden Institute.—W. E. G. May 26, 1893." In Barnett Smith's life of the Prime Minister, Mr. Gladstone has written: "This work was not written by authority, but I believe it has a fair reputation. I present it to the institute because it may be convenient to the members of that body to have at hand easy means of reference on points of detail concerning an old and attached neighbor.—W. E. G. May 26, 1893." new Hawarden Institute of fifty volumes of
