the Glass Ball Racket.

Collie Cockburn attempted at Winnipeg on Feb. 25 to break 30 glass balls in 60 asconds for $250 a side. The Manitoba Free Press says: "Betting was not very lively, as a strong suspicion prevailed that something would go wrong, and the result showed that the suspicion was well founded. Time being called, the first ball was tossed into the air. The marksman raised his rifle and the ball immediately disappeared in atoms. The next three shots were also successful, but the fifth ball was thrown crooked and Cockburn missed it. Two or three more were broken, and it began to look as if he would win, and perhaps he would have done so had not the rifle missed fire. He immediately took up a second rifle, which was allowed by the agreement, but before he got settled down to work time was called, and the referee decided that he had lost. It is said that he will make another attempt." From all of which it can be gathered that Cockburn is getting in his little work among the unsophisticated Manitobans, that, in fact, he purposely failed in this feat the first time with a view of fascing them on the second. purposely failed in this feat the first time with a view of fleecing them on the second

The Chicago News gives the following account of the Burke-Greenfield set to on Monday night last: What was intended as the great event of the evening followed—the set-to between Burke and Greenfield. Both looked in the pink of condition. Greenfield weighed 162 and Burke was about the same. Nobby Clarke seconded Greenfield and Ned Mallahan attended to Burke. The audience was worked up in Barke. The audience was worked up in artistic shape by means of a terrific wind contest between Messrs. Clarke and Mallahan as to who should be referee. Eugene McCarthy and Mike Mallory were finally chosen and both acted. At the call of time the men spraug briskly to the front. The exhibition that followed was of much artistic excellence. There was no slogging. The blows were quick and sharp, however, and the warding and countering extremely elever on both sides. At the end of the five rounds the referees decided that Burke had slightly the best of the fight on points. Although small "soft" gloves were used Burke did not show a scratch, and Greenfield's face only bore a few minute contusions. rtistic excellence. There was no slogging

A return curling match was played at the Granite Rink Tuesday between the Bank of Montreal and the Imperial bank and Bank of Commerce, the Montrealers handsomely turning the tables on their opponents, who won the first contest. Following is the score:—
