THE AGE OF LETTERS.

ch Inheritance the World Has in the Letters of Distinguished Men. From Macmillan's Magazine. published letters of distinguished men Letters of Distinguished Reh.
From Macmillan's Magasiae.
The published letters of distinguished men make, as you are aware, an important branch of English literature. To mention a few only, and those distinctively literary men, how much poore should we be fi we had not inherited the letters of Pope and Swift, of Walpole, Cowper, Gray and Byron, and, in our own day, of Dickens and Carlyla. The letters of these, and others you will recall, fore mindeed a limited literature, and for that reason perhaps, like the Sibyline Books, will be aver more and more treasured. For letter writing (of the kind that survives) began late, and it hink we may safely predict will (to use the famous apology made by Charles Lamb at yeoing away early. Letters of relations and friended will house) make up for coming for late relations and friended only about the beginning of last contury. There were doubtless interesting and charming letters exchanged between men in the centuries before—indeed we know of many such—but with few exceptions they have periabed. The reason the same periabed with the same time if these days (is such because they are so casy to send. The reason the sum of the property of the present of the sum of the

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefited the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Bosche's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents, per dozen, has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies thereby giving one-fith more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for dyspepaia and liver complaint, and the German Syrup for cough and lung troubles, have perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted in every town and village in civilized countrises. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

ir Wilfred Lawson in Nineteenth Century.

No one that I know of, except Lord Randolph Churchill, maintains that drink is a necessary of life. All responsible speakers and writers admit virtually that it is a luxury, and most responsible speakers and writers admit that it is a dangerous luxury. Indeed, its danger has been admitted for generations by our legislators, who, in countless enactments, have endeavored to provide that its distribution shall only be in the hands its distribution shall only be in the hands of patriotic, prudent and godly men, who shall see that the luxury is consumed of patriotic, prudent and godly men, who shall see that the luxury is consumed in the right form, in the right places, at the right time and by the right people, so that no harm may come to the public. About fifty years ago a movement arose among the workingmen having for its object to pledge one janother to consume no longer this dangerous uxury. Those who adhered to this pledge soon found the great benefit which accrued to themselves and to their families from cutting off such a source of useless, and, indeed, harmful expenditure. Their plan encountered, but survived, ridicule, opposition and even persecution, and those who adhered to it might truly have been called "the aristocracy of the working classes." Time went on—the "moral sunsion" of those who had boasted the benefits of abstinence went on, clearer and clearer evidence of the evils of drinking went on, but something else went on at the same time, viz, the moral sunsion of thousands and thousands of licensed drinksellers, whose living depended on maintaining the existing system of dispensing the dangerous luxury, and who were paid for every glass which the public could be induced to consume, while the advocates of temperance could only give their advice at their own charges, and without the widespread official organization which, by virtue of the licensing system, spread its ramifications through the length and breadth of the land. The contest was indeed unequal, and the fact that the temperance advocate could, under the circumstances, make even an approach to "holding the field," has ever appeared to me to be one of the strongest proofs of the soundness of their cause. Gradually, but steadily and surely, it dawned on the minds of all those who longed to see a sober nation that their wish could never be realized so long as the State should be allowed to employ its host of "paid agents" to counteract in this practical and persistent manner all the efforts of those who were preaching abstinence to the people; thus from the "masses" arose the Prohibition who were preaching abstinence to the people; thus from the "masses" arose the Prohibition party, which Mr. John Morley lately described as the most moral and the most powerful political party which has existed since the days of the anti-slavery agitation.

High Living. High living is unquestionably bad for the liver, but whether from that or other causes, the liver becomes deranged, the hest cure for liver complaint or billousness, is that standard medicine for sale by all druggists, Burdock Blood Bitters. Remember B. B. B. is the special trade mark of this medicine.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years, has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of coughs, colds and the severest lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of sorious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price, 75 cents, large bottles.
