

fection is desired, it is next to hopeless to look for it in the produce of parents that are themselves imperfect. But we are so sure that partially white top-knots are the rule of creve-cœur hens at a certain age, that we should not hesitate to show two such put with a good and thoroughly black cock. No mixture of plumage can be permitted in this latter. We should not hesitate to breed young birds with mixed top-knots, but we would not breed from those with spangled bodies.

EGG - PRODUCERS.—(A Subscriber.)—Golden-Spangled Hamburgs and Spanish Pullets will suit you. No male bird will be needed. They rarely sit. Other varieties are also equally good, but as you prefer those mentioned better stick to them.

CHICKENS DEFORMED.—(N. Roper, Salisbury.)—When chickens are hatched with deformed legs and feet, it is hereditary; but it is very rare for them to be hatched so. As a rule they are hatched perfect, if the parents are so. Nothing is so good as a dry earthen floor for young chickens.—Brick or stone flooring all spoil the chickens' feet. From their unyielding surface they cause splay feet, and prevent the wholesome practice of scratching.—Defective feet can generally be traced to one or other of the parents. The offender should always be done away with, and so should the offspring too. Let chickens always roost on an earthen floor.
