NOTES.—(Condensed.)
 (a) An unusual move in this opening, but, in our opinion, by no means a bad one.
 (b) As Black can not continue with P K Kt 4, this is altogether unnecessary.
 (c) If P K Kt 4 White replies with P K 3, threatening mate and saving the Bishop.
 (d) A premature advance. Kt K B 4 would have been better play.
 (e) Here again Kt K B 4 is far more effective.
 (f) The exchange of Kts now is by no means favourable to White.
 (g) A very bad move which Black does not fail to take immediate advantage of.
 (h) Mr. Judd now assumes offensive operations, and conducts them in excellent style.
 (i) In spite of the exposed position of White's King, we are inclined to think that, with the best play on both sides, Black can do no more than draw. When White advanced P Kt 6 he overlooked the pinning of his Queen; and though the advanced Pawn looks dangerous, it will be seen that he is only so in appearance.
