4 Cleaning Up in Hong Kong

Jane Peters looks at the effects of pollution on Hong Kong's marine life. The environmental sins are grim, but they represent opportunities for those in the business of cleaning up, reducing, and eliminating waste.

7 Cracking the China market

China is cleaning up its act. The China environmental market will be worth more than seven times what Hong Kong plans to spend before 1999.

A world of opportunity in Hong Kong

Hong Kong will be the site of the Urban Growth and The Environment World Congress from November 7-12. Canada will be well represented with Dr. David Suzuki and others in attendance.

8 A market for pollution solutions

The Private Sector Committee Centre, a uniquely Hong Kong solution, aims to promote practical, efficient, and cost-effective solutions to environmental problems. Its committee membership reads like a 'who's who' of Hong Kong business.

12 New president

A bit about this year's Chamber president, Barry Macdonald.

14 Profiting from partnership

The Chamber's largest initiative ever brought representatives from business and government together for a four-day conference in Hong Kong and Guangzhou to explore the many opportunities for Canadian investment.

20 A mission to China

A report on the Chamber's mission to Shanghai and Beijing by executive director Leslie Henderson.

22 Cruising through the Chamber's Annual Spring Ball

Anne Macdonald recaps the Chamber's most important night of the year.

24 Bank of Montreal's Matthew Barrett on the bank's China direction

Mark Evans discusses the bank's future plans to crack the China market in an interview with Chairman and CEO Matthew Barrett.

29 The Chamber's entrepreneur of the year

Greg York, owner of Interpacific Data Management, is this year's winner of the second annual Voyageur Award.
