

The report of the Commission on the activities of the Communist Party in the United States, published in 1951, is a landmark document in the history of the Cold War. It provides a detailed account of the Party's efforts to infiltrate and subvert the American government and society. The report is based on extensive investigations and the cooperation of many informants. It details the Party's activities in various fields, including labor unions, education, and the arts. The report also discusses the Party's efforts to recruit and train members, and its attempts to influence public opinion and policy. The report is a valuable source of information for understanding the Communist Party's activities in the United States.
