Although some may not think so, many persons in a position to know are of the opinion that the matter is not ended, but only beginning. It is expected that by Monday at the latest an injunction to quash the bylaw will have been issued. If successful it probably will mean a decrease in the fares, with a decrease in wages. Then will come a tie-up of the city lines, it is predicted, so that the people will find walking in vogue again. ing in vogue again.

on the question, the voting being the same as on Monday night, which was: For the bylaw, Aldermen Little, Harley, Cunningham, Keene, Drake and Wilson; against the bylaw, Aldermen Manness, Holmes, Watkinson, Moorhead and Sea-Objection Registered.

Out of Order.

Ald. E. S. Little declared that this discussion was all out of order because the third reading of the bylaw had not been moved. A motion to the effect that the final reading be given was made. "I was waiting for that," declared Ald. S. R. Manness, who then promptly wheated to the reading on the grounds.

Ald. Holmes, it is said, has something up his sleeve, for he declared that he wanted his objections recorded in the minutes of the meeting. He suggested that the councilmen, al-

Objection Registered.

Ald. L. S. Holmes registered objection to the passing of the bylaw on the grounds that the second reading was defeated. According to the bylaw, he said, it required a two-third vote to pass the reading. Mayor C. R. Somerville remarked that no objection had been made. Ald. Holmes, however, contended there had been five objections. (The vote was six to five in favor of the second reading being passed.) The proceedure bylaw was violated, he said, by the passing without the two-third vote.

Ald. W. A. Wilson declared that this was all bluffing, but Ald. Holmes as-suggested that the councilmen, although they were set as to how they intended to vote, reconsider their decisions. In Toronto the railway board had settled the strike. It would do it in Windsor, and if the men struck here again, it could do it in this city.

An amendment Carried.

An amendment to the bylaw was passed, protecting the conductors from being fined for selling fares contrary to a clause in the old bylaw—916—which states that if a conductor charges other than the rate in that bylaw, which is seven tickets for 25 cents, he is liable to a $5 fine for each offence.

This passing of the bylaw marked the burial of the five aldermen who had opposed it, Ald. Seabrook, one of the opposition, declared. The council had passed the thing in the face of the objections of a united people.

STILL THEY GO. Telegraph wires between this city and Toronto and Ottawa will next week be hot, if word regarding the release of the six war veterans imprisoned in the local jail, who wish to take part in the peace celebration on July 19, is not received by Monday. The civic authorities will spare no effort to have the men free on the day of rejoicing. Letters to Sir William Hearst, premier of Ontario; the attorney-general at Toronto, Sir Robert Borden, premier of Canada, and the minister of justice at Ottawa, have been sent by T. G. Meredith, K. C., city solicitor.

If the men are not released it would not be through lack of action on the part of the city, Mayor C. R. Somerville said. He said that owing to the fact that the men had committed culy minor offences, they should be released to be bringing.
