PROTECT CANADIAN CATTLE.
 So heavy have been the ravages of foot and mouth disease that in all cattle-breeding countries regulations of the strictest kind are in force to prevent an outbreak among the home herds. Some days ago The World published an exclusive announcement that the Buffalo yards had been closed for quarantine purposes. At first ignored, the information then given has since been abundantly confirmed by the denunciation of New York and Pennsylvania as affected states, although it is incontestable that the real locality of the outbreak is as yet unknown. Immediately on the matter becoming public the British authorities, always nervous on the subject of cattle disease, prohibited the importation of cattle from the port of New York and strengthened the inspecting staff at all importing points.

The Canadian authorities, it is reported, have brought into force quarantine regulations against the State of Pennsylvania and the order was later extended to include the State of New York. This in the circumstances does not appear to be either effective or sufficient for protective purposes. All that it means is that cattle known or suspected to come from these states will not be admitted into Canada until their freedom from disease has been assured. But as the real danger point in the United States has not been located, partial prohibition cannot be considered as in any real sense a safeguard. Besides, it has been clearly shown that foot and mouth disease may be conveyed otherwise than by infected animals themselves, and no protection can be regarded as complete which does not include hay and straw and other fodder and bedding stuffs which may be instrumental in the spread of disease.

Canada at the present moment is undoubtedly free from infection and the immunity has continued for a number of years. The healthy state of Canadian cattle has been constantly urged as a reason for the removal of the British embargo on the importation of live animals, and the slightest ground of suspicion on that point will be eagerly seized and used by its supporters. For protective purposes the states of the Union cannot be considered as independent countries, since, apart from special and temporary regulations, cattle move without let or hindrance from one state to another. And more particularly when the source of the outbreak cannot be traced it is essential that Canada should be absolutely protected, not only from actual infection, but from suspicion that any taint exists or has been allowed to enter, or that her ports are being used as shipping places for United States cattle. Dr. Clarence Marshall of Philadelphia is reported to have said that the United States Government might find it necessary to quarantine every cattle state. Much more has Canada need to extend her quarantine regulations to the whole of the United States. In a matter of this nature absolute safety should be the first object and nothing that can secure it should be omitted by the responsible authorities.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.
 Prince Edward Island delights in surprise. When the country was swept by the Laurier landslide of 1904, it was the independent islanders who saved Ontario from splendid isolation. They returned three Conservatives and one Liberal. These gentlemen, especially Messrs. Martin and McLean of Queen's, never allowed the wrongs of Prince Edward. The Liberal member was naturally the least aggressive, and great hopes were entertained of his defeat, but even the "forecasters" in his own party conceded that there would be no Conservative loss in Prince Edward Island. Both parties met a surprise on Oct. 26. Mr. Hughes indeed was beaten, but all three Conservatives members—including Mr. LeFurgey—were also defeated. The result of 1904 was reversed entirely. Hardly less surprising is the recent election, which has all but overturned the present provincial government.

Prince Edward Island has helped to make history. Originally the French colony of St. Jean, it passed to the British crown when invaded by a detachment sent by General Wolfe as part of the long campaign which culminated on the Plains of Abraham. Soon after this, the colony, then thirteenth British, sought to change its name to New Ireland. This was not confirmed by the colonial office, and, after a long discussion, the island was christened Prince Edward in honor of the Duke of Kent, the father of Queen Victoria.

For years a troublesome land question perplexed the colony, but, when this was disposed of, the people bent their energies to the formation of a maritime union. The arrival of the Canadian commissioners, headed by Sir John Macdonald, adjourned the Charlottetown conference to Quebec, and led to confederation. Prince Edward, however, remained aloof until 1872.

Our baby province has a shrewd notion that she must be insistent to get her share at the table, surrounded, as she is, by so many long-armed sisters. We might be misled into thinking that she is in quite a distressed condition, but her neighbors down by the sea assure us that this "Garden of the Gulf" is literally overflowing with milk and honey. Her people have not made much progress in getting their tunnel to the mainland, and, just now, it may seem a costly enterprise; but certainly something ought to be done to place them on the main line of the L.C.R. As matters now stand, a private corporation takes toll upon their freight, as it passes from one government railway to another.

However, this fertile province has some consolation. There is always plenty to eat; and, if there is not always plenty to drink, it is because she prefers prohibition. Prohibition, by the way, in this province, is not limited to liquor. The automobile is also prohibited.

AN APPRECIATION OF CANADIAN ART IN STAINED GLASS.

A large memorial window has lately been erected by Robert McCausland, Limited, representing "The Angel's Announcement to the Shepherd." The numerous figures comprising the group are all life size and are admired for their beauty of drawing and color. The following letter has been received from Messrs. John Scott & Co., architects, 515 Moffat Building, Detroit, Mich., the donors of the work: "Detroit, Mich., November, 1908. 'To Robert McCausland, Limited, '36 West Wellington-street, 'Toronto, Canada,'

"Dear Sirs.—The memorial window is now installed and is entirely satisfactory to my brother, my sister and myself, and we desire to thank you for the very fine piece of work and to compliment you on the strong, artistic interpretation of a very beautiful story.

"The day of dedication was fine and clear, the beautiful effects of the window, therefore, showed to good advantage. The window is greatly admired by the rector, wardens and all the congregation. It will certainly remain a credit to you and a lasting source of pleasure to the people of All Saints' Church.

"I shall be happy to forward a New York draft on receipt of your bill.

"Very sincerely yours,
 "Arthur H. Scott."

In addition to the large number of important commissions for memorial windows of the highest class recently executed by Messrs. McCausland, they have under course of construction many interesting works of the kind, including three large windows for the University of Toronto in honor of students who fell at Ridgeway in 1866.

"FROM COMEDY TO CHRISTIANITY"

J. M. Wilkinson has secured the services of John R. Clarke to-morrow for the People's Sunday Services. Mr. Clarke has spoken at 59 Chautauquas and is regarded by many as the most racy and captivating speaker in America to-day. He was engaged to open the season's work for the Canadian Temperance League to-morrow, and as the opening was deferred Mr. Wilkinson secured his services for two meetings in the Grand Opera House. At 3 p.m. he will speak on "From Comedy to Christianity" or "How it Happened." Mr. Clarke was a comedian for ten years before taking up platform work. In the evening he will speak on "A Many Sided Man." Mr. Clarke has offered his services to Mr. Wilkinson after New Year if he opens another theatre. Special program of music has been arranged. The soloists will be Mrs. Chatterton, Mr. Chas. Swaffield, and Mr. Herbert Manly. Motion pictures on the "Life of Christ" will be given at both services.
