CHILD DROWNED

At Advocate Harbor, N. S., on last Saturday, the young daughter of John Elliott was drowned in a creek. It appears that Mr. Elliott had gone with his daughter, aged three or four years, to gather driftwood along the shore. He had driven to the beach in a cart, and Elliott, leaving his daughter in the cart, had gone along the beach in search of wood. He was gone but a few minutes, and on his return was surprised to find his daughter had disappeared.

He searched for her for a few minutes, and then finding no trace of her, summoned some of the neighbors to aid him. About 5 o'clock her body was picked up by a motor boat and taken ashore. It is supposed that she got down from the cart and wandered over to the edge of the creek and fell in. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents.

RETURNING TO WED GIRLS IN FRANCE

Many ex-Doughboys Find Lure of Paris Too Strong.

Paris, Aug. 26.—That the lure of Paris is still strong, even on the doughboys who were rabid in their desire to get home "hot sweet" is proved by the number of ex-soldiers from the United States who are returning to France by every boat.

Returning doughboys already outnumber tourists two to one. They are coming back with all manner of excuses—as traveling salesmen, as travelers at leisure, as agents for various businesses and as plain unemployed, hoping for a job.

So many of them are showing up in Paris—finding an utterly changed Paris now that the Y. M. C. A. hotels and the cafes are gone—that the Red Cross and the American Legion are hard put to solve the problem.

The Red Cross, which still maintains a gigantic organization in Europe, is employing as many stranded ex-soldiers as it can, but complaints have already been heard in Washington about "arm-chair" jobs over here and many who seek work with the A. R. C. fail to find it.

The American Legion can't do more than make futile hunt for jobs for them. Two reasons, are given by the ex-soldiers for returning to France. First, they "want to be somewhere they can buy a drink," and second, they want to marry French girls. The last is the excuse heard ofttest.

ARCHITECT SUES AN M. P.

An interesting case was begun this morning in the County Court before Judge Armstrong, Brodie vs. McLean, a claim for $200 for work alleged to have been done in connection with a house owned by the defendant, H. H. McLean, M. P., at Rothsay. The plaintiff was F. Neil Brodie, architect, and he was suing almost the entire morning.

L. P. D. Tilley, K. C., appeared for him, while the defendant conducted his own case.

The amount in dispute was a balance from an account of $400 of which half had been paid. It was for work in drawing plans for the house, which was being renovated in 1917,
