MARRIAGE A CRIME AGAINST SOCIETY

Judge Made Severe Arraignment of W. E. D. Stokes, Wealthy New Yorker.

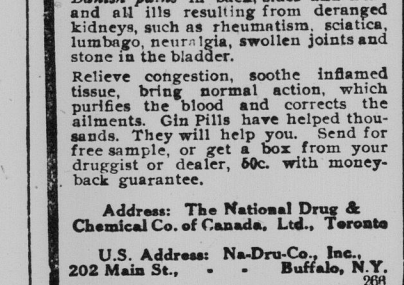

Characterizing the marriage of W. E. D. Stokes, New York multi-millionaire, to Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, as "a crime against society," Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver this week handed down an opinion in the juvenile court awarding the custody of James and Muriel, the two children of the union, to the mother. A large share of the opinion was devoted to a scathing arraignment of the wealthy couple.

Speaking of Mrs. Stokes, the decision says: "Her harrowing story of abuse, of cruelty and neglect, convinces the court that he never was fit to marry any decent girl, much less to be the father of her children. Instead of making a real home, he seems mostly to have made a hell for his wife during the eight years that she seems to have suffered and endured his flagrant, insulting, depraved and, as she testifies, degenerate conduct."

Dwelling on the statement that the marriage was "a crime against society," Judge Lindsey adds: "In her case some considerable charity allowance should be made for her youth and susceptibility to his flattery, and her undoubted innocence at that time of either the world or Mr. Stokes, or of men such as her testimony shows he must have been."
