Modern weapons of war are rapidly developing into very humane instruments as compared with those of a fery years ago. This tendency is not due to any humanitarian reasons, but solely be cause it is not policy to create whole sale slaughter in present-day warfare. Experts have discovered that the wound an enemy is far better than killing him. A number of wounded sold iers entails responsibility on the sid that they represent, which is a sever handicap in a strenuous war campaign. BIG POTATO CROP IN MAINE THIS YEAR	Bell 'Phone	Wounds Heal Rapidly That is one great reason why modern weapons tend to put a man temporarily out of action and not to kill him. The terrific speed of a bullet discharge from the modern high-power rife sends it, in nine cases out of ten, right through a man. It puts him out, but seldom kills him. The wounds made by high-speed bullets, though severe, heal very rapidly What is more, the modern bullet seldom poisons a wound, as was the case with the old type of shot. Owing to the heat developed by the high power used in the discharge, the bullet is rendered sterile or antiseptic and very seldom causes complications by blood poisoning. A proof that this is the case is supplied by the recent Balkan War.	and houses. It certainly may kill while carrying out this mission, but more of ten its flying pieces cause flesh wounds serious, but not fatal. In the same way airship bombs and shells, though at first sight serious death-dealing factors, will prove useful more for wrecking property than taking thuman life. To start with, aerial craft engaged in dropping bombs will have to stay at a high altitude to clude the sharpshooters on earth. Thus a falling bomb from a great height will not be difficult to avoid. Its fall will be gauged with more or less accuracy, certainly with sufficient correctness to enable those underneath to run clear of the spot towards which it is falling. All things considered, modern warfare is tending to become far less an affair entailing wholesale slaughter—not because we are be-	made by a former official of the rallway to help to interest manufacturers in the advantages of the provinces and should Mr. Hayes decide upon a course of a similar nature, Mr. McKenna assured him that he would find the press of the maritime provinces heartily endorsing his action and co-operating with him. J. C. Keating of the Moneton Times gave an interesting address upon "The Future of the Semi-Weekly," dwelling at some length upon the matter of operation, publication, rates, etc. He was given a hearty reception. In the discussion which followed it was given as the view of President Hawke, F. W. Wallace of Sussex and H. B. Anslow that the day of the semi-to the weekly would soon be over it giving way to the weekly in connection with the daily publications. The matter was re-	thinn, power to detain him or immediately ship him back whence he came. While Thaw is in jail on the commitment signed by the justice of the peace at Coaticook, he is safe from the immigration department, who have no cover over him, and it is thought that the defence lawyers will leave him there are in the plan of action. THE COURT'S FAR-SEEING EYE (New York Evening Post) Lawyers in New York scanned the plans of the new court house eagerly for one detail which has been overlooked in the general discussion of the design. That detail had less to do with the administration of justice than with the prevention of crime. The judicial ermine might be hung where the moths might eat it, or thieves might break in and steal—but what of counsel's hat	of the Canadian Press Association, was heartily greeted in his address upon "Coperation Art. agst Newspapers." He referred to the various problems in newspaper publishing which has resulted in the formation of the Maritime and Canadian Press Associations. Amongst other things, he dwelt upon the matter of some advertising agencies doing business through Canada and which were not deserving of the name. He denounced the amount of free publicity given to certain affairs, instancing Canadian western townships and various stories of a press-agent type which should be paid for, because it cost money to put them in print. The speaker touched upon the various matters which urged for the coperation of newspapers, making reference to postal and freight rates.	Ind Charles D.
