NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"Mr. Currie's volume is not a bulky one, but it is a full one. By shutting out irrelevant matter, which abounds in some controversial works, he finds room for an effective discussion of every important point connected with the Baptismal controversy.

"Mr. Currie shows that he is well read in the controversy in which he mingles, and that he has thoroughly mastered his subject. Particularly, he manifests a perfect comprehension of the matter, as surveyed from the stand-point occupied by his opponents. We are prepared to say that we know of no book, of such moderate size, which treats the questions in dispute, on the subjects, mode, and design of Christian Baptism, more fully, more vigorously, or more convincingly. He does ample justice to the Pædo-Baptist cause. He conducts his argument, with force and precision. He knows what he wishes to say, and he says it candidly and cogently.

"The book, if generally read, cannot but do much good. It is excellently adapted for general circulation. It is a compact little volume and lively withal. And, though small, is packed full of argument and illustration on the question discussed. He that masters this little book will have mastered the arguments in behalf of the Pædo-Baptist side of the controversy."—Provincial Wesleyan.

"This Catechism will do more to allay the honest anxiety, or prejudice of many minds, than all the logic of the most elaborate treatises on the subject. We should like to see this volume scattered over the country by tens of thousands. It will, we are confident, save scores, if not
