

and has no opportunity of learning anything about the case. The Missionaries have but little assistance from the Government. In fact, to judge from the policy adopted of letting Indian affairs take their chance, it would seem that our Government was following the example of America, and trying to exterminate the Indian race. If your Society would establish an office here, or appoint an agent to whom Indians might apply at all times for assistance, it would make a great difference.

It would of course be the business of such an agent to investigate all Indian grievances, and to render assistance in case of need, as well for the purpose of protecting Indians from acts of aggression, as for putting the law in force for the punishment of evil-doers. It might also be possible for an agent, having the support and encouragement of your Society, to form a local Society here, which would assist the education and training of the Indians. I shall be much obliged if you will bring the matter before your Board, and let me know what further steps I can take to bring the Colony within the scope of the operations of the Society.

I am, your obediently,

W. S. Sebright Green.

J. W. Chesson,

Secretary to the Aborigines' Protection Society.
