

Lines Written on the Death of Robert Coburn, Jr., by his Sister.

I had a little brother once,
The fairest of the fair,
I often kissed his rosy cheek,
And combed his curly hair.
But like a rose plucked in the bud,
Beginning first to bloom,
He bowed his pretty little head,
And death then sealed his doom.
The fever raged upon his brow,
He sighed and heaved his chest,
And Ah, methinks I see him now,
His cheeks are red and flushed.
Go take a look at that lone bed,
Look on that lifeless clay,
For little Robert is now dead,
Not dead but gone, we say.
His eyelids closed, his lips are pressed,
His breathing has now ceased;
We hope the Lord his soul has dressed,
To reign with him in peace.
Dear friends and relatives don't mourn,
Jehovah is ours still;
He can awake at the last morn,
Substant to his will.
Pembroke, Sept. 14th, 1863.

Mind makes the Man.

There is a little simple truth—
Dispute it, ye who can—
'Tis not old age, or lively youth,
But mind that makes the man.

Wearing the Beard.

One great cause of the frequent occurrence of chronic bronchitis, may be found in the reprehensible fashion of shaving the beard. That this ornament was given by the Creator for some useful purpose there can be no doubt, for in fashioning the human body, he gave nothing unbecoming a perfect man, nothing useless, nothing superfluous. Hair being an imperfect conductor of caloric, is admirably calculated to retain the animal warmth of that part of the body which is so constantly and necessarily exposed to the weather, and thus to protect this important portion of the respiratory passage from the injurious effects of sudden checks of perspiration. When one exercises for hours his vocal organs, with the unremitted activity of a public declamation, the pores of the skin in the vicinity of the throat and chest become relaxed, so that when he comes to the open air, the whole force of the atmosphere bears upon these parts, and he sooner or later contracts a bronchitis; while had he the flowing beard with which his Maker has endowed him, uncut, to protect these important parts, he would escape any degree of exposure unharmed. The fact that the Jews and other people who wear the beard long, are but rarely afflicted with bronchitis analogous disorders, suggests a powerful argument in support of these views.—Dr. May.

Home

This is not the home, though that may have its charms; nor the field, carefully tilled, and streaked with your own foot-paths; nor the tree, though their shadow be to you like a great rock in a weary land;—nor yet is it the fire with its sweet blaze-play;—nor the pictures which tell of loved ones; nor the cherished books,—but far more than all these—it is the Presence. The Lure of your worship is there; the altar of your confidence there; the end of your worldly faith is there; and adorning in all and sending your blood in passionate flow, is the ecstasy of the conviction, that there at least you are beloved; that there you are understood; that there your errors will meet ever with gentlest forgiveness; that there your troubles will be soothed away; that there you may unburden your soul, fearless of harsh, unsympathizing ears; and that there you may be entirely and joyfully—yourself.—Dr. May's "Reveries of a Bachelor."

The mind is like a glowing spark, which, when suffered to rest, is ever in danger of being smothered by the dross and ashes which life deposits. It must be kept constantly in motion, lest it perish in its youth. The quiet monotony which is so suitable to the body, as it becomes impelled by age, is fatal to the mind.

MORE GOLD.—It is said that unmistakable evidences of the existence of gold upon the river Moira have been discovered. The precious metal has been found in small nuggets about the size of a pea, and pronounced a fine article by those qualified to judge. That section is known to abound in a variety of other minerals.—Montreal Herald.

A man named Rittcher, the head of the passport office in Warsaw, was recently stabbed to the heart in the street close to his own door. He had just organized a new police.

A whale was lately captured near Bideford, on the English coast, by a party of young ladies, who were bathing. The length of this "monster of the deep" was about three feet deep.

COSTLY.—At a late sale of autographs in Paris, a pair of yellow paper was sold for 500 francs. It was a note written and signed by Martin Luther, and dated 1534.

Ten Frenchmen kill themselves every day. Statistics show that 3,000,000 have thus died in France within the present century.
