MARCH.—We dare say you have noticed the inconvenience and trouble occasioned by not having a place for everything and everything in its place. For successful farming a great many tools and implements are required. We have often seen a great many of these scattered about, and very frequently exposed to all sorts of weather during a whole winter. This is very bad policy every way. Wood will rot and iron will rust by changeful atmospheres, and much time is lost by looking-up scattered implements and getting them into working order. Time is money, and depreciated property means loss of money. It will pay to have suitable places erected for the preservation of tools and implements.
