PRETORIA.

Pretoria, the capital city of the South African Republic that was, a position which it has held since 1863, was laid out in 1855, and was named after Commandant Pretorious, the first President of the republic. It is distant thirty-two miles from Johannesburg by road, but the railway route, by reason of its curves, lengthens the journey to forty-six miles. From Cape Town it is 1,040 miles; from Port Elizabeth, 740; from East London, 692; and from Durban, 511.

Seeing the opportunities for a better situation the site for Pretoria might have been selected with more care. Placed in a hollow, in wet weather a part of the city may be said to be in a swamp. The heat during the summer months is very considerable and the heavy rainfall occasions a great deal of mist. The winter climate, however, is perfect, fresh, bright and invigorating, but the total disregard of the commonest sanitary precautions has been the cause of much sickness in the past. The number of deaths, considering the open nature of the town, is excessive; the rate for the first half of 1891 being forty-four per thousand per annum, reckoned on the white population only. Of late years; however, owing to the town being a little better kept, the rate of mortality has been lower. The population of the town is, under ordinary circumstances, about 12,000. A considerable proportion of the population is of British origin. Up to within a few years ago the Government buildings were of a most humble character, in keeping with the town, but with the advent of the Uitlander element into the Transvaal came an enormous increase of revenue to the Government, through their heavy taxes, and thus, with the money to hand, large buildings for governmental purposes were erected with a lavish hand. Most of the public offices are contained in Government buildings, a handsome pile that cost about £200,000 to construct. The central tower is surmounted by a statue of Liberty, which gave rise to a strong protest from a section of the community, who, undecided whether the objectional figure represented the Queen or the Virgin Mary, demanded its immediate removal in either case. Meeting halls are contained in the building for the use of both the Upper and Lower Houses of the Volksraada This building faces on Church square, which is the most central and important square in the town, Church The other public buildings of note the Dutch Reformed Church, St. Alban's Anglican Cathedral, the new market buildings, the hospital, the museum, the Roman Catholic Church, public library, etc. Church street has been almost entirely rebuilt since the discovery of the gold fields and contains several handsome stores. The residence of the President, a long, low cottage, with a wide stoop, is situated at the western extremity of the Pretoria was held by a British force for several weeks during the war of 1881, and nobly withstood the attacks of the Boer army besieging the town. Since 1896 the Transvaal Government, have spent vast sums in erecting forts around the city an expenditure which, it would appear, has been made in vain.

Unlike Johannesburg, Pretoria has an ample supply of good water, the new waterworks opened in 1891 having a capacity of 2,000,000 gallons per diem. This, together with the fact that several thousand pounds have been spent within the last few years on roads and drainage, has tended to decrease the rather heavy death rate of the population.

For a town of its size, Pretoria is well supplied with hotels and clubs, and has both a public park and zoo logical garden laid out. Willow trees, first put in as fire posts, have taken root and flourished, and now shade and adorn the town. It is connected by rail with the Cape, Orange River Colony and Natal systems of railway, and is the terminus of the Netherlands Railway to Lorenzo Marquez.

To-morrow the electors of British Columbia will decide Joe Martin's fate.

The Dominion Government has taken to itself power to create honorary colonels out of civilians. This is aping old country snobbery with a vengennce. The colonel of a regiment should earn his position by service and military capability.

Sunday fishing is prohibited by law, and is as much a violation of the Sab-bath as sawing wood or planting a garden.—Blenheim News.

It is more so, because the law doesn't pronibit a man from either sawing his wood or planting his garden on Sunday if he wants to. But if he should wander away to some quiet nook, light his pipe and make a successful cast for a fish on the Sabbath, justice at once might step in and impose a penalty of from $1 to $10 and costs. /

At the recent Methodist conference n Hamilton the billeting system was discarded. Each delegate had to find his own food and lodging. The result was a falling off of about one-third in the lay attendance. Most of the ministers, however, received voluntary invitations to private houses.

In North Renfrew at the last election the late Andrew T. White, Conservative, was elected by a majority of 153 over Henry Barr, Liberal. The bye-election takes place on June 23, and nominations a week earlier. John W. Munro will be the Liberal candidate, and Edward Dunlop the Conservative standard bearer. Prior to last election the constituency was Liberal.

Mr. Lister fought the Crow's Nest Pass deal almost to death inside the caucus, and the party was committed atrocious bargain that most against its own better judgment by Wilfrid Laurier's appeal to the personal loyalty of his followers.—Toron-to Telegram.

Yet while the Crow's Nest Pass job was pending the Planet was shown a private letter from Sir Wilfrid Laurer in which he indicated his personal opposition to the deal and said the Globe was not dictating the whole policy of the Liberal party. After that, however, he wilted, and the 'Globe's grab went turough. While the Telegram is about it it might explain what changed Sir Wilfrid so that he was induced to appeal to the lovalty of his followers to get a transaction through that he didn't like.

MARK TWAIN'S LATEST.

They were, of course, talking war, and the newcomer, wishing to know the feeling of England in the matter of the future of the Transwaal, asked Mark Twain how he found public sentiment in England regarding the independence of the republics. "Well," said the genial humorist, "I find the English are paraphrasing a part of the burial service. They are all, quietly repeating, 'Mr. Gladstone giveth and the Lord Salisbury hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

The Thirteenth Imperial Yeomanny Battalion, captured by the Boers on Friday near Lindley, Orange River Colony, consisted of two Irish units and two companies of the Duke of and two companies of the Duke of Cambridge's Own, including Lord Donoughmore's company, which was regarded as the crack company of the corps, a number of men in the ranks being closely allied to noble families.
