For some time past reports have been persistently coming into the police department of petty larcenies from private houses and shops in various parts of the city, and though the detective staff kept on the alert night and day and left nothing undone to try and capture the culprit, they were absolutely without a clue to work upon and almost despaired of ever bringing the guilty one to justice. During the past two days the detectives (officers Byrne and Tobin) had wind of the suspicious actions of a woman who, they were informed, was going about the city selling goods, and keeping pretty close tabs on her actions they suspected that the vendor could not be straight in having such material to sell, and securing a search warrant yesterday they proceeded to the house and were simply appalled at the sight they witnessed when they were admitted to the house. Each room of the domicile was literally packed with dry goods of the best kind, articles of apparel and household effects, with shop goods in great variety, and so much did the apartments hold that the officers could only get through a little alleyway about two feet wide between the goods which in each room were piled from the floor to the ceiling. In fact the goods salesmen to do the work of classification thoroughly and satisfactorily. A casual look through the material distributed about revealed the fact that there were in the collection a great variety of window curtains, children's and ladies' new boots and shoes, blankets galore of almost every quality, cushions of various sizes and styles, pictures, dress goods, children's, men's and women's spats and leggings, gloves of various materials and colors, brass curtain holders, 100 hooked and some rope mats, towels, pillow cases, coverlets, covers for dressing cases, men's women's and children's underwear, about 100 parcels, some of them in bags, addressed George Knowling and containing his hardware boxes of millinery and other packages, the contents of which were not known when our reporter left the station at a late hour, and a large stock of other articles that will take the better part of to-day to assort, classify and list. In the collection were several articles and boxes of mackintoshes and other things with the shop cards attached, and as if this was not enough, out in the corridor, inside of which is the cellar, were placed seven trunks and wooden chests filled to their utmost capacity with goods which the police last night had not time even to take a perfunctory glance at. One of them resembled a seaman's chest, and all were very large, two at least being after the size and style which are used by drummers for their samples while they are on the road. It was thought last night that some of these packages, which were securely locked, contained hardware, but two men could barely lift them off the floor, so weighty were they. The woman (Mrs. Charlotte Butler), from whose house the property was taken, stoutly denied that the goods were stolen, but circumstances, coinciding with the presence of the goods in her home, make the police doubt her story. The Telegram interviewed neighbors of the woman yesterday and they all affirm that there was an air of mystery about herself and her home for months past. The blinds on the windows were rarely raised, and they say that nightly the woman was absent from her home till a late hour, and then she often seen returning and bending under the weight of parcels she carried. Again, they assert at very early hours of the morning she had been seen coming home laden with goods and parcels but none could guess where she obtained them. Her husband, they say left her some four years ago and she lived alone, except for her daughter, a child about 7 years old. She was reticent about her affairs and would let few if any people visit her. Amongst the goods found on the premises was a handsome album in a frame, covered in green plush and containing a photo on the cover of Lady Sheehy, the deceased wife of Mr. E. D. Shea and mother of Mr. George Shea. The police are thoroughly convinced that the goods have been stolen, and they further state that they believe the woman has been thieving from stores and private dwellings for years. The goods accumulated to such an extent of late that she was forced to sell some of them, and it is thought believe she could dispose of the whole in time and without detection. The police, it appeared to several who saw the large stock of material last night, would do well to display it all in some public building so that those who own the good could identify their property, for she cannot do so piled up as it is now in the station without spending days in looking through the big stock kept there for inspection.

QUIT TEA AND COFFEE
What the Great German Specialist Says.

It disappoints some people to be told that tea and coffee cause disease, but it is best to look squarely at facts and set the face towards health for that's more fun than anything else anyhow. A Cincinnati man consulted a Berlin physician on nervous diseases and says: "Four years ago I was an habitual coffee drinker having used it for 25 years and being naturally of a nervous temperament I became almost a nervous wreck, greatly suffering from insomnia, almost constantly constipated and weighing only 125 pounds." He consulted physicians and took medicine all the time but had no relief. About three years and a half ago I went abroad and while in Berlin heard frequently of a great physician, Prof. Mendel, an authority on nervous trouble, so I resolved to consult him. "Prof. Mendel surprised me very much by asking at once if I was a coffee drinker and on my telling him I used it two or three times a day he said, 'It is poison.' After carefully explaining me the matter with me whatever but what could be entirely cured in 30 days by letting coffee and other stimulants alone and letting me have a hard time following his advice. I did not know what to do until I came home and told my wife what I had done. We tried it and it worked. I felt much better and in the last three years I haven't been absent from business one hour on account of ill health for my health is now as good as new, I have a good appetite, sleep well and weigh 175 pounds." Any nervous person who drinks tea or coffee will feel better from 20 to 30 days change to Postum. Trial easily proves this. Look in packages for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

IF drinking tea and coffee results in a feeling of nervousness and irritability, you may depend upon it that caffeine—the drug in tea and coffee—is getting in its "back licks"—the reaction from the drug.

Common sense would suggest stopping the cause—tea and coffee—short off. The change is easy if you have well-made —the food-drink made of wheat, including Phosphate of Potash (grown in the grain) for rebuilding brain and nerves.

Postum is known to be free from any drug whatever, and is rich in the vital elements which make for sturdy vigor.

Tim Shannahan on the Noon-Day Gun.

Delaney is becoming one of the keenest of our party and bids fair to outdo Tucker in "catching on" to the amusing side shows of our city. This certainly refreshing to sit by the bogey and hear him unravel his tale. He was exceptionally good last night. Mrs. Tucker is beginning to admit that there is something in him. Well, says he, I was down town to-day, away down in Holytown, and I noticed a big quantity of powder being carted up to the Hill. I hailed one of the carmen and asked him what invasion they were preparing for, and he looked at me with surprise and told me they were carting the powder to the Block House for the twelve o'clock gun.

Now, says Delaney, this custom of firing a gun at noon to keep the clocks of the town correct costs us a big lot of money every year, and what a loss 'twould be to us if the Government decided to cut it out. We hear it on two days of the year—one is on the day of the Races, for it sends forth its blast at the time when the interval of an-hour is on, and the other on a Sunday when we go up to the Hill when a sealer is signalled. Firing a noon-day gun is an ancient custom and like the past with the present; but for my part I think 'tis a waste of spondulices. The noon-day gun was intended for a quiet city where the business and the modern business methods had not yet kicked up sufficient noise to drown the report. It was also instituted for government employees and snug pensioners who have time to wait from ten minutes to twelve till noon and keep their ears cocked to catch the report in order to test the correctness of their watches; but as for its value to us with our noisy streets I fail to see where it comes in.

Tucker agreed with the remarks of Delaney and said that the gun should be removed to some more suitable location where we would be sure to hear it. He thinks the Museum steps would make a capital spot, as this is a nice quiet locality where the report would get a fair show to kick up a noise. Of course it might cause terror in the hearts of the old folks, but after a time they'd become used to it. But as it is now there always exists a doubt whether 'tis the gun that is heard, or the noise of the man who hears it. You will hear general officials ask in the most solemn tones, "Is that the gun?" and the Magistrate on the Bench appears to be somewhat doubtful. The main echo enters the chamber of justice for he inevitably looks at the clock to make sure 'tis "the gun" that he hears, and if the clock shows ten to twelve the Magistrate decides 'tis not "the gun" that he heard, puts his time-piece in his pocket and soon forgets all about the "gun" till the next day. The man whose ingenious mind first discovered the way to have correct time certainly was in earnest, and 'tisn't right that we should allow this important matter to become a mere piece of red tape. How valuable it is too that we should have the correct time to the minute in this important matter to become a mere piece of red tape. How valuable it is too that we should have the correct time to the minute in this important matter to become a mere piece of red tape.
