Death of Mrs.

After a long and painful illness. orne with exemplary patience and resignation, there passed peacefully away at the General Hospital early this morning, Agnes, beloved wife of the late Capt, W. H. Tucker, both of Harbor Grace. The deceased met with a very serious accident at her home in he latter place on the 13th of June Coming from one of the out-fell and broke her left leg, the injury being such as to make it necessaryin the opinion of the local doctors-to have her brought here for surgical treatment. After several weeks careful nursing, she seemed to be slowly and surely recovering; but, unfortunately another deplorable mishap occurred. Early in September, when about to be removed from the room she occupied to one of the corridors for change and fresh air, the invalid chair on which she reclined tipped forward, causing her to fall a second time and break her right arm midway between the elbow and the dent which was aggravated by internal trouble she never rallied. Disheartened by suffering and worn down by grief for the loss of her husband moval to hospital, she daily grew weaker, in spite of the unremitting attention of officials there and friends She leaves two brothers-

Robert S. Parsons, of Harbor Grace, and one sister. Mrs. Richard Tuffin, of Boston, Mass., and many others to mourn the death of one much endeariendship. Her remains will be conreyed by train to Harbor Grace, where interment takes place at 3 o'clock to-

The smile is the lighting system of e human face. It is the cheapest ilinshine, for it doesn't cost you anything and it may even make your everlasting fortune.

is to pull the corners of your mouth outward and upward a trifle. If you can add to this a twinkle and a dimteeth-the combination will be more valuable to you than a college diploma or a rich grandfather.

With a smile of this sort a man can go out and get votes, credit, business, friends and forgiveness for forty kinds of faults, including bigamy. with the same kind of smile, a young woman who hasn't anything else to 26th; Debility. her name, not even good grammar. can go out and win a happy home, decorated with a husband who will pay Clearing Station, Suvla; Nov. 26th. as much as $100,000 a year to keep his wife's smile in good running order.

However, smiles, like other good things, can be abused. Some smiles are not worth looking at, because they are only face deep. The blackest hearted villian who ever lived can buckle on a winning smile and make friends, while he is robbing an orphan asylum. Beware, also of the smooth, sleek man with the built-in smile who hovers around you as friendly as a hot-water radiator, while he is laying plans to get hold of your business on a judgment note, and boot you out seven minutes after it falls

The smile is thus one of our greatest prevaricators. Some people lie with statistics, some with cosmetics you step on a woman's gown at a party, and she smiles sweetly at you. don't believe it; and when a candidate for office leans up against you with a million candle power facial display and tells you that you are eminently fitted for a fine appointive office, tell him you will take a rain check for the smile until after election, when the
