Who Determined on Policy of Passive Resistance.

Impressive Ceremonies Mark Late Presidents Departure from Washington—An Alpine Disaster—Four fall into Unknown Depths.

GENERAL RITES WERE IMPRESSIVE AND SIMPLE. WARREN HARDING LEAVES WASHINGTON FOREVER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9. Warren Harding left Washington tonight forever. His short but eventful moment of power and heavy responsibilities was ended. Grim-faced and distant he shook the nations farewell. As the funeral train drew out a legion of men stood with rifles and saluted; great folk and small, in their thousands, stood silent and with heads bared and the President was gone, but behind his lingering memories, such as he would be proud to know, filled men's minds as they thought of him. As the dim east room the dead President was borne into the view of the nation, the pealing of a trumpet along lines of steel flashing to the sky; a moment later it marshalled soldiers and sailors down the steps to the capitol with General Pershing riding in command. Down through the long array of mourning crowds the cortege wound to the capitol. The body of the President was borne to the capitol by President Collidge, Chief Justice Taft, and Mr. Wilson. The muffled drums took the tale as the column climbed up the winding tree-shaded way, then the pealing of the drums gave way to the muffled tones of a great army band that played "Lead Kindly Light". The flag wound casement was lifted up the long, wide stone steps, led by his honor guard of high officials and admirals. The heavy casket was carried slowly to its place, a wreath of bright colors resting above the sleeper, the erect slender figure of the sorrowing widow moved to her escort of those who served her intimately with the dead chief. Her face was almost invisible behind the black veil she wore. The religious ceremonies were striking in their simplicity, but the short prayers, the murmuring of low voices in the Lord's Prayer, the prayers reading, and the blending of a male quartette in "Lead Kindly Light," the hymn most beloved of the dead President, and at the end of the service "My God To Thee," then the collection. When Mrs. Harding had led the new President and his Cabinet, the Diplomatic, General and Admirals all filed out and the great chamber was cleared, except for the casket, then the flag of the President was drawn back, the heavy cover was set aside, and the face of Warren Harding, a year's peaceful face untouched by the ravages of his brief illness. The face was tranquil and saved from the slight pallor of death. It had been seen only rarely, hardly seemed that the spirit had fled, that the eyelids would not lift presently to show the kindly thoughtful eyes beneath. The eastern doors were thrown open and waiting, stretched a mile long, columns of people ranked four abreast. More than three thousand people saw the body, it was estimated, and as many more were turned back disappointed after long hours in the moving lines. The casket was not long after taken to the station and placed on board the train. Without sound of bell or whistle the train began to move slowly down the track on the last journey to Marion and Warren Harding was gone from Washington forever.

CUNO'S SPEECH HAS NO EFFECT.

LONDON, Aug. 9. In Chancellor Cuno's speech before the Reichstag, there was nothing he said that would seriously affect the British Cabinet and it still failed in dealing with a serious problem. The Chancellor's declared indifference to what Die Hards have been regarded as the British Government's too great tenderness toward Germany is hailed in pro-French quarters in England as another reason why there should be agreement between France, Belgium and Great Britain.

GERMANY WILL CONTINUE POLICY OF RESISTANCE.

BERLIN, Aug. 9. Passive resistance will be continued with all the strength of the German people. "Free from mad acts of violence and terror activity" those in the occupied region; Chancellor Cuno asserted in addressing the Reichstag when it convened for a short extraordinary session yesterday. The Chancellor was prevented from speaking for some time by the Communists, who greeted him with epithets of traitor, swindler, as the President of the Stinnes Companies Board was going to speak. Herr Cuno was subjected to continual interruption during the speech, which was received somewhat coldly by the house. Alluding to France's demand for cessation of passive resistance, before she was willing to open negotiations or say what she wanted, the Chancellor emphatically declared that it was impossible to ask the people of the Ruhr to abandon their sole weapon unconditionally. "What we cannot do and will not do is to abandon a German land and betray our fellow countrymen. We refuse to work under the bayonets of our oppressors." Subsequent to the merciless obstinacy of the French Government the Chancellor declared, would have to be sealed with a document which would be Text provides for general treaty to be signed by all the members of the League whereby they agree to aid members who are victims of aggression or threatened invasion.
