The parade was a big one and a fine one. The Irish Seventh, of Chicago, a crack regiment in appearance and discipline, led the first division, and behind them came distinctive Irish military organizations from different parts of the country. In the divisions that followed the militia were the various Catholic civic societies, including the Catholic civic societies, including the Catholic civic societies, including the Catholic Order of Foresters, temperance and church societies and literary organizations. We may expect to see it a law at no distant day. This measure means that things which affect the material and moral interests of Ireland are to be controlled in the future by themselves. There are defects in the bill—we don't claim it is perfect—but we hope to eliminate the errors in time."

After a few remarks as to his satisfaction at once more being among his former friends, Mr. Gaetz said: "How manifest is the touch of inspiration in this old piece of Hebrew poetry, and every part of this psalm applies so strongly to Christ that it would be difficult to wrench it out and apply it to any other person. If you look for victorious marching and the accomplishing of great purposes along the lines of peace and righteousness and truth, we have it in the march of the conquering Lord." Mr. Gaetz then turned his attention to Coventry Patmore, a prominent writer in a leading review, who stated recently that if Christ's mission into Aldermen Who Object to Paying Bills for Unauthorized Trips Abroad.

attention MRS. SMITH ON "SOCIAL PURITY."

The subject of "Social Purity" afforded an admirable opportunity for the display of much carnestness and eloquence by Mrs. Holbrook Smith, of Washington, D. C., in her address to young men in Viotoria Hall yesterday afternoon. A large audience had assembled to hear this gifted lady from the American national capital discuss one of the cardinal evils of the present age. She spoke with that force, fluency and fascination which is generally concurrent upon strong conviction. Mrs. Smith is a stalwart champion of the White Cross movement, the object of which, she explained, although not entirely circumseribed within these limits, was to create so pure a public sentiment that vice cou described within these limits, was to create so pure a public sentiment that vice cou described within these limits, was to create MRS. She maintained that there was a fearful loss to a man physically when the body ruled the mind and not the mind the body and said that marriage was unscientific and said that marriage was unscientific unless based upon supreme affection. B. WILD AT THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL.

The First Congregational Church was far too small to accommodate the crowds that assembled to hear Dr. Wild, the ex-Bond Street, Toronto, preacher yesterday. Especially was it the case in the evening when, as usual when the doctor visits London, hundreds were turned away. The sermon was on "Three worlds without infants," and the text was taken from Isaiah, Ixv., 20: "There shall be no more thence an infant of deys, nor an old man that hath not filled his days; for the child shall die an hundred years old; but the that hath not filled his days; for the child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner, being an hundred years old, shall be accursed." During the last 300 or 400 years of the millennium not a child would be born on earth, the dector held, and this was one world without infants. Then he contended at length that there would not be a child in hell. This constituted world No. 2 of a childless state. Then the doctor held that there would be no intantile years in the millennium proper, neither gray years in the millennium proper, neither gray hairs nor aching bones; because humanity would be resurrected in the prime of life, at which prime the Saviour was crucified.
