OVEREXERTION IN BICYCLING. A physician testifying at an inquest in England the other day, as stated in the Sun, said that the heart of the dead man, who had expired suddenly, was twice its natural size. "He had a bullock's heart," said the witness. The heart of the average man, he said, weighed from ten to twelve ounces, while that of the dead man weighed two pounds. When a juror asked him to state the cause of a "bullock's heart," the physician ex-plained that it arose either from want of exercise or overexertion. "Any bi-cyclist who scorches," he added, "is running the risk of having a 'bullock' A more dangerous form of exertion on the wheel than scorching which is of comparatively brief duration, allowing the heart to resume its normal beat of about 72 to the minute, is long distance riding when continud hour after hour without sleep. is always to be condemned as foolhardy, for the tax on the heart is such that sooner or later the effects will surely be felt, no matter how sound the physical condition was at the time of the ordeal. "For a number of years I have been troubled with kidney weakness, brought on by heavy lifting and exposure to wet and cold; also a heavy strain whereby I wrenched my back. I experienced great pain in the chest, extending through to the small of my back and around the loins. Before taking Doan's Kidney Pills my blood became vitiated, and my kidneys were greatly deranged in their action. I suffered also from nervousness and general debility, and I am thankful to say that by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, assisted by Laxa-Liver Pills, I am wonderfully improved. I also suffered from constipation and liver complaint, but found Lexe-Liver Pills an excellent remedy, aiding Doan's Kidney Pills in their splendid work.

This description of the work was translated by the Literary Digest from L'Ilustration":

"It is a Christ seen in half length, opening, with greatness of gesture, his arms to the world. The head, which is of superior beauty, breathes sweetness and a mysterious majesty. The head from chin to crown measures not less than two meters, the width of the oody, from hand to hand, being fifteen neters, while the phalanx of the little finger would not be covered by a man's

"This colossal figure recalls the reigious arts of the Byzantines, whom the painter declares the 'master of the decorative,' albeit he blames them for neglecting rature, and rightly nounces the savage gaucherie of their design. In his Christ, M. Tissot, aided by the advice of R. P. Sertillange, the first of art critics in such a matter, has attempted to solve the following problem: To combine in one human problem: face the strongest expression of intel-ligence with tenderness and beauty. "That which the thousands of visiters who will admire this figure will not sence (soupcomeront), perhaps, is the symbolical significance of each tint and line. The mouth is partly open to signify that God is communicable; the lips a little in the shade symbolize the mystic speech, in consonance with the eyes, which are interrogative, severe, profound. But this severity is softenmand is active for the best grades of vague smile. * * The vestments. most nobly draped, conform to tradi-tion. * * The background is of azure, on which, on each side of the figure, seven rays of gold irradiate. Above the head a triangle, traversed by a dove, symbolizes the Trinity and the Holy Ghost, covering Humanity accomplished and made divine: while highly wrought nimbus stands as tion of his life, and wholly different from that which crowned the Saviour during his troubled journey here below. * * In painting this Christ, he has inspired himself, not only with the statues in the cathedrals at Reims and Amiens, commonly called the 'Beau Dieu,' for the contour of the head, the Olympian aspect of the face the 'rhythm of the beard,' but, stil more, with the spirit that animated th ous sculptors of that great epoch of the 13th century. "His work will assuredly be discussed; a work not only of vast size, but of originality, it constitutes an extremely interesting innovation."
