ence, and still a much greater gap between them and the amount paid to a member of the Dominion House.

The figures are for provinces: British Columbia$1,800 Alberta 2,000 Saskatchewan 1,800 Manitoba 1,800 Ontario 1,400 Quebec 1,500 Nova Scotia 700 New Brunswick 1,000 Prince Edward Island ... 500

Dominion House 4,000 A dispatch from Calgary recently gives the impression that the Farmer party in Ontario are in favor of establishing the indemnity at the same figure in Ontario, and of cutting the amount paid to a Dominion member from $4,000 to $2,500. It is possible there are men who can do well on the $4,000 allowance, but there are not many of them. Take, for instance, a member from Western Canada. He has to give up his business there for the time being, the trip back and forth taking up too much time to permit of keeping up close touch, such as is possible for some of the members from Ontario, who go home almost every week-end. It is undoubtedly not the intention of the country that men should be sent to the various legislative centers, and paid a price that represents a loss to them. By doing such a thing the country would be encouraging these men to look around to see what they could pick up in the form of "considerations" in order to break even.

It is not likely that there will be any reduction in the indemnity allowance; in fact, Ontario may have to consider making a slight increase, and doing so with the provision attached that the increased sum includes all payments for the year. This would do away with the objectionable feature of members voting themselves bonuses for long sessions.

The electorate does not like this method of doing business, and many of the members are also averse to It, even though they may vote for it. Our salary list is not high, provided we get the right sort of man.

nesses of all priesthoods, namely, the incapacity for efficient military leadership and their inevitable jealousy of all other religious cults, that the power of secular kingship arose. The foreign enemy either prevailed and set up a king over the people, or the priesthoods who would not give way to each other set up a common fighting captain, who Gordon Steele, equal; Walter Flan- retained more or less power in peace This secular king developed a group of officials about him and began, in relation to military organization, to take a share in the pristly administra tion of the people's affairs. So, growing out of priestcraft and beside the priest, the king, the protagonist of the priest, appears upon the stage of human history, and a very large amount of the subsequent experiences of mankind is nly to be understood as an elaboration complication and distortion struggle unconscious or deliberate, beween these two systems of human control, the temple and the palace. And it was in the original centres of civilization that this antagonism was nost completely developed. The barparic Aryan peoples, who became ulti mately the masters of all the ancien civilizations of the Orient and of the western world, never passed through a

years as a neophyte; the path of learning the clumsy letters of primitive times is slow and toilsome; he becomes erudite and prejudiced rather than a man of the world. Some of the more active-minded young priests may even cast envious eyes at the king's sorvice. There are many complications and variations in this ages-long drama of the struggle going on beneath the outward conflicts of priest and king, between the made man and the born man, between learning and originality, between established knowledge and settled usage on the one hand, and creative will and imagination on the other. It is not always, as we shall find later, the priest who is the conservative and unimaginative antagonist. Sometimes a king struggles against narrow and obstructive priesthoods; sometimes priesthoods uphold the standards of civilization against savage, egotistical r reactionary kings. One or two outstanding facts and incidents of the early stages of this fundamental struggle in political affairs phase of temple rule on their way to are all that we can note here between civilization; they came to civilization
