HOW B. C. VOTED YESTERDAY

Six Seats for Conservatives, with Comox-Atlin Still in Doubt-Heavy Majority for Imperial Unity

Victoria, on the fateful 21st of Sepember that gave the answer of the Canadian people to the proposal of commercial union with the United States at the cost of an unquestionable weakening of the imperial tie, presented a splendid object lesson to the stranger within the gates and to the world at large of how a sober-minded sane and substantial people record their will when called upon to face a crisis in their national life. The voting was steady, orderly, continuous from the opening of the polls until their close. The voters apparently took themselves and their responsibilities with serious ness, and in casting their ballots for the independent development of their national destiny by the Canadian people were actuated-if the casual earnest conversation about the various polling places is any safe criterion-more by earnest appreciation of the large national and even imperial issues in the balance than by any mere local or petty commercial considerations. Gossip about the voting places also proved curiously but significantly indicative of a deep-seated resentment of the intrusion in Canadian political affairs of the Hearst newspapers and men looming large in the public life of the neighboring republic. These facts impressed themselves very strongly upon American visitors, many of whom were heard to comment generously upon the essential contrast afforded by this election with a similar national record on the other side.

A Revelation.

"A Canadian election is a revelation, said Elmer Monteith, of the Chicago Record-Herald last evening, "of the conscientious. thoughtful British way in which your people exercise their right to rule. There is no hysteria about them. They don't seem to follow the party through excitement on organization, but vote soberly-almost religiously-on the dictates of principle. Your election here shows me what a strong people you have on this side of the line, They will make a great nation out of this Canada.

"And my, don't they like the old flas too! I'd no idea they were so intense ly British over here-and I don't think very many of our people did, or do."

The election day was as a day one of almost Sabbath calm. The throng o the voters was handled to and from the polls systematically and without disa greement or confusion. The machiner very smoothly and quickly, and chal lenges were unnecessarily numerous. But the people were out to record an honest verdict on great issues, and the weight of public opinion once set in ting was virtually an absent factor for odds asked by the Liberals were prohibitive, and doubtless so intended. and discord equally and happily conspicuous by its utter absence.

The result, not merely locally, but provincially and nationally, came, if street gossip is a fair guage, as infinitely less surprising to the inconspicuous citizen, the silent voter; than to the supposed student of politics, following "the game" with unremittent zeal. Resentment of anything in the direction of a weakened distinct Canadianism and of any interference with a growing and self-created Canadian prosperity seemingly were at the root of the day's verdict, and so recognized by the man in the street, and there was food for some reflection in the casual comment of one who stood aside as the bulletinscanning crowd thronged Broad street early last evening:

"British Columbia did it. She started the wave for Canada with the demonstration of her conspicuous prosperity and her demonstration of clean and capable government under conserva particularly, it may fairly be said to contain no element of surprise, save perhaps in the size of Conservative ma jorities. Thus, for example, while the return of Ald. Stevens in Vancouver was conceded, even the staunchest of Victoria Conservatives scarcely counted upon the popular Harry Senkler coming so close to the loss of his deposit. The figures for the chief population centre rooted is Conservative sentiment today among the people-the everyday, democratic, workaday people:

From this it will be seen that Ald. Stevens' majority is 2748, and his pluradity 1917, Mr. Kingsley (Socialist) losing his deposit.

Even more significent of the depth and sweep of the Conservative wave in westernmost Canada was the crystallization of the sentiment of New West. minster district, where Mr. John Oliver went down to ignominious defeat-a defeat so complete and comprehensive that this leader of the Liberal party in Provincial affairs loses his deposit by failing to obtain so much as fifty per cent, of his Conservative opponent's

In Nanaimo it is but fairness to say Mr. Ralph Smith polled a heavier vote than had been looked for, his defeat by a large majority having been conceded even by his staunchest supporters. At a late hour last night Mr. Shepherd was admitted elected, probably by upwards of 200 majority. Of the polling places heard from, with details of the voting, the following is an abstract:

SPOKANE, Sept. 21.-John Wendt, who has lived on a small island in the Spokane river since the founding of the town of Spekane Falls, more than thirty years ago, broke into the collectors' class when he announced that he purposes gathering together a collection of hairpins, which he will melt and mold nto medals to be presented to suffragettes throughout the United States and elsewhere who pass these tests: Take care of a baby, bake wholesome bread, and darn socks. Wendt collects the pins with a magnetized cane, his favorite haunts being lobbies of hotels, theatres. cafes and street crossings where the traffic is heavy. His shack on the island near the Dicision street bridge is equipped with a small smelter and a series of molds for making medals. He earns his livelihood by mending umbrellas and kitchen utensils. Conservative Candidate is Returned to Ottawa by a Majority of 567-Story of the Day's Polling

As had been predicted, Victoria yes terday added its voice to the chorus which resounded from the Atlantic to the Pacific in denunciation of the trade arrangement with the United States which imperilled the national destiny of Canada. The Conservative candidate in this constituency was elected by the very large majority of 567.

Locally the day, pregnant as it was with an issue vital to the welfare of the constituency as well as of the Province, was singularly devoid of incidents which might proclaim the importance of the moment. Voting in the various polling stations was termed slow and it was not until the hour that the closing of the polls was reached that there was any semblance of excitement in the outcome of the local

The day dawned cloudy with altogether inauspicious weather conditions, but shortly after the noon hour the weather improved and it was then felt that a large vote would be polled. The fact that while heretofore there had been but one polling station, there were now five mitigated somewhat against the concentration of interest in the local event which would otherwise have been the case.

The heaviest polling of the day at the various ward stations was recordbetween 3 p.m. and 5 p.m., when the polls closed. At three o'clock the large number of men employed by the corporation were released from further work and their presence at the polls was soon made manifest. Large individual employers of labor also gave their employees what was tantamount to a half holiday and this assisted greatly in an expeditious taking of the ballots.

Crowds Assemble. With the five polling subdivisions in the local constituency, it was not an easy matter to compute the result locally. Anticipating early returns, large numbers of people had assembled in front of the Colonist office, where every arrangement had been made to publish comprehensive bulletins. It was shortly before the polls closed in this city that the returns coming from the east disclosed that the Laurier government was likely to go down to defeat; and the interest aroused at this announcement was very great. Shortly thereafter the official bulletins of the local contest were made nublic and there was a tremendous scene of enthusiasm in the vicinity of the Colonist office as the figures were displayed upon the screen. Then quickly came the various bulletins The Comox-Atlin vote is as yet far from the Eastern constituencies telling from complete, an element of doubt of the landslide which had overtaken

As it became known that the government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier had gone down to defeat and that the reciprocity pact had been rejected by the people of Canada the scenes on the streets were quite unique in the history of political contests in this city. Speedily the whole of Broad street from View street to Yates, stretching in front of the Colonist office, became a seething mass of humanity and cheer after cheer went up as the various bulletins were thrown on the canvas. Most of the returns from the eastern provinces were received prior to 8:30 m. For a time the crowds who thronged the streets seemed unable to comprehend the significance of the tremendous victory which had been achieved. It appeared almost too much to hope that the government which had ruled Canada for the past fifteen years and which had gone to the country with a majority of no less than 45, had actually gone down to defeat. Shortly, however, the truth began to dawn upon the people who had assembled in front of the Colonist office, and, indeed, all through the business section of the city, and then ensued a scene of excitement and enthusiasm quite unique in the annals of the city.

Brass bands were placed in commission, and brooms, soaked in coal oil were selzed by the enthusiastic workers on behalf of the Conservative candidate and for a couple of hours "joy

ENTHUSIASM IS

Outburst of Patriotism Follows Receipt of News of the Great Conservative Victory Throughout Dominion

A crowd variously estimated at from ten to fifteen thousand people packed Broad street, centering in front of the Colonist office, awaiting the final bulletins in the great national fight which signalized the doom of Laurierism and the ushering in of a period of "Canada for the Canadians." Never were such scenes of enthusiasm witnessed in the capital city of the province as bulletin after bulletin signalled victory all along the line. Many in the vast audienc were ladies, and they joined as heartily in the cheering as did their male escorts; and the scene from the windows of the Colonist office was an inspiring There was a sea of upturned faces

Just before nine o'clock the Censerva tive organizers, headed by Mr. R. F. Green, and Mr. Leonard Tait, the latter resident of the Victoria Conservative ssociation, got the successful candidate i Victoria, Mr. G. H. Barnard, and the Premier, Hon, Richard McBride, together and with other stalwarts of the party, they commissioned a tally-ho and organ ized a parade, which was led by two brass bands and torch bearers.

Outburst of Cheering. At this time the crowds thronging the usiness streets of the city were very dense, and it was with great difficulty that the processionists were able to make their way towards the Colonist office, where those anxious to hear the final returns had massed. As the large tally-ho bearing the dignitaries of the party hove in sight it was taken as the signal for a great outburst of cheering, which must have been heard far away.

Heading the procession as it came in o view was a stalwart blue-jacket bearing aloft the British ensign. He was supported by a civilian carrying the Union Jack-and the sight of the emblems of the Empire in the glare of the torches was again seized upon as a reaon for long and continuous cheering.

But the enthusiasm reached its limit s it was seen that the central figures on the top of the tally-ho were the suc cessful candidate and Hon. Richard McBride. Tremendous cheering was the salutation of the crowd, and the bands played "For he is a jolly good fellow." On silence being obtained, Mr. Tait. who acted as chairman, declared, amids the most tremendous enthusiasm, that from the Atlantic to the Pacific Canada had declared that it would be true to the best traditions of the British Empire, and that we were now free to worl out our destiny without any interfer-

Mr. G. H. Barnard was received with flattering outburst of applause. Pitching his voice so that his words might be heard at the extreme fringe of the vast crowd, which thronged Broad street he thanked the people of Victoria for the magnificent majority which he had been tendered. He thanked also the large number of workers for their untiring energy in the Conservative cause They had helped to accomplish a grand work for the great British Empire. (Applause.) He felt convinced that the people of Victoria would never regret their verdict, for they had taken stand with the rest of the Dominion of Canada in favor of the welding together of a strong, united and prosperous Em pire. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

Mr. Tait next introduced Mr. Mc Bride and the crowds went wild as the picturesque figure of the premier British Columbia, who had lent his powerful influence to the great victory which had just been achieved, rose i the glare of the many lights which reflected upon him. As soon as silence had been obtained he said: "Fellow citmotion proves an irresistible force. If there was any question twenty-four hours ago as to where Canada stood that doubt has been dissipated tonight and we are sure of our citizenship in the grandest Empire on which the sun ever shone (renewed

Loyal Administration

Continuing, the premier said there would now, he felt assured, be ushered in a government of which Canada might well be proud, a government headed by the great leader, Mr. R. L. Borden (cheers) and he would say in all sincerity that he believed that that government would give Canada a good, faithful, and loyal administration. He could add also, that in that administration British Columbia, which had done so well that day, would support that government in a very material and important manner (cheers).

Concluding, the premier said that the moment of great rejoicing he must not forget the splendid efforts which had been exerted for Conservative success by the Colonist newspaper and its proprietor, Mr. J. S. H. Matson. The Colonist, the oldest and most reputable newspaper in the province, had lived up to the best traditions of British jour nalism and Mr. Matson was deserving of all praise (loud applause).

Canada would enter upon a new era into a stronger and better national life; and for the successful candidate, Mr. Barnard, who had scored such a magnificent victory, he was sure he would bespeak full attention on the floor of parliament for the needs of the capital city of the province.

As the premier concluded the chairman called for three cheers and a tiger, which were given with true British heartiness and these were followed by cheers for Mr. Barnard and Mr. Matson. Patriotism Won

Col. Prior, the old Conservative warhorse, who fought so many successful contests in Victoria, was the next speaker, and he was greeted with cheers or rising. He said he would not detain them long All he wanted to say was that it was now clear Sir Wilfrid Laurier had made the greatest mistake of his life in appealing to the pockets of the people of Canada instead of to their patriotism, as had Mr. Borden (loud cheers). He thanked God that when such an appeal had been made by the Liberal leader the people had risen to the occasion and spurned his offer and decided once and for all to remain fast by British connection. Victoria was to be congratulated on the outcome of the contest, as was the whole of Canada

(loud applause). Mr. Green and Mr. Blakemore also made brief references to the great victory which had been achieved in Victoria, the former thanking the many Liberals who had put country before party and rallied to the Conservative

Amidst cheers and the music of the bands, and headed by the glaring torches, the procession continued on through the immense crowds to the Broad street hall, where, after another impromptu meeting, with a brief ad-dress of the same character, the gather-ing dispersed. It was long after mid-night, however, before the streets bore their usual appearance, many lingering over their efforts to rejoice at one of the most tremendous political convulthe most tremendous political convul-sions in the history of Canada.

Extraordinary Methods Adopted Former Associate of Marconi to Baise Money

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 21.-Phillipe Vignoli, former associate of Marconi, inventor of wireless telegraphy, who was apprehended in Los Angeles several months ago on the charge of obtaining $2,000 by false pretences from Antonio Scarpelli ,a local contractor, has made J. Rufus Wallingford's most ambitious promotion schemes appear as the work of a novice, according to testimony adduced at a trial now in progress before Judge E. H. Sullivan and a jury in the Spokane county superior court in this city. Scarpelli alleges, that Vignoli represented he had an invention in mind whereby he would be enabled to see around the world, adding that when the apparatus was perfected Scarpelli would have no difficulty whatever in neeting face to face, as it were, his relatives in Italy at any time of the day or night.

Vignoli, the principal witness testified, told him that mountains, skyscrapers, ramparts of steel, waves of the sea and all the obscuring phenomena of the elements must give way to the powerful lenses and ingenius contrivances as easily as the plate glass of a show window affords light to the structure. Scarpelli advanced more than $2,000 to the inventor on this representation. The specific charge is that Vignoli secured $390 from Bertha Scarpelli, niece of the complaining witness, by telling her that Scarpelli told him he might have the money. The girl gave to him on the understanding that the money was to be used in perfecting the invention. Instead, however, Vignoli hied himself to the south, where he lived as a gentleman of leis-

While in Los Angeles Vignoli dispatched letters and telegrams to the Scarpelli family, asking for $500 with which to complete the invention. His arrest followed, with the foregoing result.

Dominion Census.

OTTAWA. Sept. 21 .- Census returns for the whole of the Dominion of Canada ought to be completed very shortly now, probably next week. Returns are still coming in, and it is impossible to judge what the population of Canada will be. Employees of the census de partment, however, who have an insight to census matters have got up a guessing contest to be decided by the publication of the census. The favorite figures are around 8,000,000, although they go even higher. It is expected by emplayees that the population will prove to be well over the eight million mark.
