Six New Canadian Books.

The Strong Arm.

By Robert Barr. Paper 75c., cloth $1.25

"A volume of interesting stories, principally from the mediæval ages. Many of the plots are very ingenious. . . . The last story reminds us of some of Rider Haggard's weird romances. . . . The book displays a good deal of historical research."—Christian Guardian.

The Eye of a God, and other Stories.

By W. A. Fraser. Paper 60c., cloth $1.00

"The Canadian Kipling."—Literature, London, Eng.

"All good, and told with humorous insight."—Times, Philadelphia.

Bonhomme.

French Canadian Stories and Sketches.

By Henry Cecil Walsh. With illustrations by Wm. Brynmner. Paper 60c., cloth $1.25

"They show a remarkable insight into the lives of our French-speaking fellow-countrymen of the humbler class."—William Henry Drummond, author of "The Habitant."

Clipped Wings.

By Lottie McAlister. Paper 40c., cloth 60c.

"It is a human story—a natural, wholesome picture of the every-day life of people we seem to know. I like it much."—Mrs. Jean Blewett, author of "Heart Songs."

Diane of Ville Marie.

A Romance of French Canada. By Blanche L. Macdonell. Paper 50c., cloth $1.00

"A very valuable contribution to the literature of our northern neighbor."—Boston Times.

Trevelyan's Little Daughters.
