THE LATE WAR.

nt, after nable his ffectually rned, by of June: ne money addreffed peech.

OF

nfible of ider your y attempt he utmoft ty in the of France g, for the iordinary, to anfwer

they hope and they d only in at fo the will make in company s, off Maratched, ennad actually under her nt came up captain and a figure, will do fervice, as much greater, as it is A. D. exalted higher than ever before.

They apprehend; the prefent critical juncture convinces, that alliances on the continent, as they are unnatural, fo they muft ever be prejudicial to the true intereft of England; that there is no gratitude to be expected from, no dependance to be had on, fuch allies: allies, who though faved, fupported, fubfifting by the blood and treafure of this kingdom for more than an age, have taken the opportunity of the firft prospect of prefent profit, to break through every tye.

Not difcouraged by the ingratitude of allies, nor the ambition of enemies, they have with pleafure beheld the fword drawn to vindicate your honour, the honour and intereft of England; convinced, and proud to let all the world fee, that England is able to fight her own battles, to ftand by her own natural ftrength, against all her enemies.

Though ever attached to your Majefty's perfon, ever at eafe under your juft government, they cannot forbear taking notice of fome circumftances in the prefent fituation of affairs, which nothing but the confidence in your juftice, your love to the people devoted to you, could hinder from alarming their moft ferious apprehenfions; and to whom fhould they make their fears known, to whom fhould they complain, but to their protector, their guardian, and their father ?—Subfidies to foreign Princes, when already burdened with a debt fearce to be borne, cannot but be Vol. I. D d feverely

9