Convention is Now Fairly in Swing After Auspicious Opening.

The assembly hall of the Labor Temple is a neat auditorium that never needs to apologize for itself at any spot indeed, and lent the setting so great an occasion as the fifty-first convention of the International Typographical Union called for. From the bedecked balconies there smiled down upon the weighty proceedings below the lady visitors to the convention. It was a spectacle that should prove verily inspiring to trades unionism in gen-and There were about 350 delegates on the floor when Chairman Hugh Stevenson of the convention committee called upon the premier, Mayor Urqunart, Goldwin Smith, Ald, Graham, Robert Glockling, E. M. Meehan, Ed. Randall and John Armstrong to give the city's welcome. President Meehan of Local 91 took the chair.

Gownings

The premier met with a reception which, in its heartiness, might, well have reminded him of post-election gatherings of last January. Mr. Whithey's words showed him thoroly in sympathy with trades unionism, whose benefits, he asserted, were beyond argument. He spoke of the cordial relations between the two countries represented, and as a closing touch drew attention to the presence of Prof. Goldwin Smith, "one of the greatest publicists of this age," a claim that the audience gave assent to in hearty hand-clapping.

The mayor declared for Toronto that no other city on the continent was so well organized in the interests of trades unionism, and the typographical union had given to Toronto many useful and prominent citizens, among them the late E. F. Clarke, M.P. The mayor paid a graceful compliment to the ladies' auxiliaries in connection with the organization, whose general tone he was sure would be raised thereby, Ald.
