she was only to be possessed of the property by marrying with the consent of Mr. Pell, the executor of his will. It is therefore needless for me to say that any attempt on your part to litigate so plain a feature in the instrument would involve you in costs, and the mortification of failure. Madam," continued he, turning to Eliza, you did very wrong in being so disobedient, and yet," he added turning his eye on Tim's noble figure, and frank, intellectual countenance, "there seems abundant excuse for your conduct—ha, ha, ha!"

Tim answered, "I entertain great respect for you Mr. Ridgely, and regret that you have not a more worthy client. Lucky will it be for him if your services are not hereafter required to shield him from the penitentiary. I wish you both a good morning," and presenting his arm to Eliza and Mrs. Winthrop, left them abruptly in the parlour.

"The impertinent youngster!" exclaimed Old Pell, "but we go, Mr. Ridgely, and get the will proved. Mr. Sampson is the subscribing witness. I'll call upon him and have it established this afternoon, and then I'll see who is to possess the homestead, and estate."

"They took their departure. In the afternoon Pell called upon Mr. Sampson, and producing the will, told him that as he was the subscribing witness, he wished him to go before the Judge of Probate, and prove the will."

"Why," replied Sampson, "I have done that already, six weeks ago."

"What do you mean, Sampson?"
"Just as I say; that about six weeks ago I swore the will before the Judge of Probate."

"Impossible!" replied Pell, "he taking the will out of his pocket; but, as he took it out, his eye for the first time fell upon the following endorsement—"

"—Court, s. c. The within instrument duly proved, and by me recorded in Liber M. of Wills, pages 200 and 209, this 17th day of June, A. D. 1849."

SOLOMON HALE, Judge of Probate.
Pell was dumb with astonishment. At length he inquired, "who had produced the will at the time it was proved?"
"A Mr. Jocelyn," replied Sampson.

"The whole truth now flashed upon Pell's mind. It was he who had frightened him on the evening the will was taken away and Tim must have been the apparition who had taken it away. His rage was now without bounds; and not recollecting how he stood by what had transpired, and that his own crime of forgery might be made to appear, he mounted his carriage, and drove to Farmingdale Park. On arriving there he burst into the room where Mrs. Winthrop, Eliza, and Tim were seated at the table.

"You are very kind, uncle," said Eliza, "one's friends do not often call twice in one day."
"You villain!" roared Pell. And so Mr. Jocelyn, you are the thief that stole the will from my bed room table, about six weeks ago? You needn't think to escape, you will be called on by an officer to-morrow morning and go to jail!"

"Thanked," said Tim, "I've no occasion, I only borrowed the will a few hours, just to get it proved. Was it not returned the next evening? Ask Peter."
"Old Pell almost foamed at the mouth."
"And so you conspired with my servant to rob me of the will, did you? Very well, Mr. Jocelyn, there is a law for these things!"

"Yes," replied Tim, sipping his tea very coolly. "Peter did assist me a little in the matter. I was in his room, and stood at the window of the door, as you were about to commit the crime of forgery."
"The last word was pronounced in the same unearthly voice that had frightened Pell on the evening alluded to. He saw that his crime was known and that he was in Tim's power."

Tim saw his situation, and commiserated him. He promised not to divulge his crime on the condition that after surrendering the will and estate, he would leave the country. This was immediately done, and Tim and Eliza soon after left Farmingdale Park for the homestead of her father, where they still reside: surrounded by wealthy and sincere friends.

As for poor Eliza she never again returned to the college; nor was he ever seen in that vicinity.

A DOUBTFUL CASE.—A county justice, who had been late invested with the title, was just trying his first case, when his wife thinking that she too was included in the office, came and very gravely seated herself by the side of her husband. She listened very attentively to the witnesses for the plaintiff; and by the time they had concluded their testimony, she had in her own mind fully decided the case in her favor. But the evidence for the defendant gave the question quite a different color; and doubtful what decision ought to be made under existing circumstances, she turned to her husband with a perplexed look, and with a very conciliatory tone and manner, asked, "Dad what are we going to do in this case?"

WATTY MORRISON.—The facetious Watty Morrison, as he was commonly called, was entertaining the commanding officer of a regiment at Fort George to pay on a poor fellow ordered to the hospital. The officer consented, on condition that Mr. Morrison should agree to the first favor he asked in return. This favor was to perform the ceremony of baptism on a young puppy. A merry party was assembled, and Mr. Morrison desired Major— "to hold up the puppy." "As I am a minister of the Church of Scotland," said he, "I must proceed accordingly." The Major said he desired no other. "Well, then, Major," began with the usual question, "do you know yourself the father of this puppy?" The Major took the joke, and threw away the animal, failed in his attempt to throw ridicule on a sacred ordinance.

A traveller in England observing a peasant at work, and seeing that he was taking it remarkably easy, said to him: "My friend, you don't appear to sweat any."
"Why no, master, seven shillings a week's sweating wages!"

TO-LIPS.—An Editor says: "A far young friend of ours recently invited us to rub the fragrance of his lips to lips; we did so with great union, whereupon he boxed our ears, and affected to say he had allusion to a pretty flower of that nature. 'Alas, alas,' he thereupon moralized, 'there is no truth in love!'"

THE FARMER'S PAPER.

The Canada Agriculturalist; The best and cheapest Farmer's paper published in Canada, and the only one now published in Upper Canada.

THE second volume of the Agriculturalist in its present form commences January, 1850. It is issued monthly, and contains 24 pages, double column, imperial octavo, during the present year, the advertising sheet will be dispensed with. It will contain numerous illustrations of Machines and Farm Implements, Plans for School Houses, and Diagrams in explanation of questions in mechanical science, and natural philosophy.

Great care will be taken in the selection of matter, whether relating to Agriculture, Horticulture, Mechanics, Domestic Economy, Education, or general Science. Several intelligent practical farmers and gardeners have promised correspondence, and the editors will be happy to receive communications from all their subscribers. Such are of interest will be freely published. Two or three gentlemen of high scientific attainments (one of whom is connected with the University of Toronto) will contribute to the columns of the Agriculturalist.

Farmers, subscribe and pay for your paper, and then write for it; all parties will thus be pleased and benefited.

The Agriculturalist is devoted to the interests of the Farmer, and the proprietor of the paper, besides the time, labor and anxiety spent in its publication. In the prospect that the farmers of Canada will not support an agricultural paper of any kind, to continue? We hope not. Let those who love their country, and desire its improvement, make a little more effort this year.

As an inducement to extra exertion, we offer the following Premiums:—ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS! SEVENTY-FIVE DOLLARS! FIFTY DOLLARS! Every person who will procure 200 subscribers for the Agriculturalist, containing 100 copies, 25 copies upwards, will be supplied at half a dollar; twelve copies and upwards, 3s 9d. Single subscriptions, one dollar. Local Agents, who will procure over three subscribers, and remit us the subscription, free of postage, will be allowed 25 per cent. GEORGE BUCKLAND, Secretary Agricultural Association, Principal Editor, assisted by Wm. McDougall, Proprietor.

All letters should be post-paid, and addressed to the Editors of the Agriculturalist, Toronto.

TEN SHILLING IN ADVANCE. VOLUME III. AGRICULTURE

From the Canada Agriculturalist. A FEW PRACTICAL REFRIGERATORS. The busy and joyous season increasing warmth and brightening sunshine to the Vegetable Kingdom, vigor to a countless number, has again arrived; upon the resources, both of the cultivator of the soil and the golden fruits of Autumn influenced, both in quality, by the degree of which the former brings to us, and the latter to the present practical and reasonable business of the farmer. The winter that has now been distinguished in Upper Canada by a severity of cold and sudden changes of temperature; characteristic of our "Old Country" every description has done to observe is too frequently experienced in the Province; the winter that has now been distinguished in Upper Canada by a severity of cold and sudden changes of temperature; characteristic of our "Old Country" every description has done to observe is too frequently experienced in the Province; the winter that has now been distinguished in Upper Canada by a severity of cold and sudden changes of temperature; characteristic of our "Old Country" every description has done to observe is too frequently experienced in the Province;

Now the only way for arising from the extreme cold of winter is by a judiciously pursuing a system of cultivation. Root crops, such as turnips, carrots and peas, the strictest truth to be said, in spring particularly, will create and the ordinary run of such crops, what an advantage such crops of food for a stock of every description that they are given judiciously, will secure a plentiful supply for the winter, particularly for the blood, and healthy state of the animal, which is good as a stock of every kind.

It is of the last importance thoroughly prepared for the winter, the failure of a crop, the hot weather, the summer of the climate, deep cultivation and judiciously pursuing a system of cultivation. Root crops, such as turnips, carrots and peas, the strictest truth to be said, in spring
