On board the Tuscania were at least ten happy young women. An ocean had separated them from the men of their hearts, and now that barrier was crossed. Four of the ten were even happier than the other six, because their lovers were at the dock to greet them. And three of the four achieved the greatest desire of their hearts almost as soon as they had landed by promising without delay to love, honor and obey.

SHERIFF RETURNS
Mr. Wilson Reports
Mr. W The opening sentences of the choir in service were chanted by the choir in its procession to the west door. After the dean read the 23rd psalm and the lesson from the eleventh chapter of Revelations, verses I to VII, then followed the hymn "The Strife is O'er, The Battle-Done," and to the notes of the organ the mourners followed the coffin through the choir to the place of burial in the second south bay. Then the choir sang Goss' anthem "I Heard a Voice from Heaven," and after the committal prayers had been read the congregation joined in singing Kipling's "Recessional." The Archbishop of Canterbury pronounced the blessing. Before the congregation left the Abbey the organ played Chopin's funeral march.

The authorities of Westminster have decided to reserve the south bay, where Mr. Law was buried, for the interment of statesmen and the corresponding bay on the north side of the Abbey for men of science and letters.

The former premier and his family during their life in London had been members of St. Colomba's church of Scotland, a church to which many Scotch residents of the city are attached. Mr. Law's ashes had been taken there from the house on last Saturday night after the cremation and the pastor, Dr. Archibald Fleuing, conducted a Presbyterian service there at 10.30 o'clock this morning.

Inasmuch as flowers for funerals in the Abbey are coat are to custom a great number of weaths were sent to St. Colomba's church, a distance of two miles from the Abbey. The authorities, of Westminster have
