Should the army which is warned for service be sent to South Africa, the Admiralty will have to face a task which is unprecedented in the world's history—the simultaneous transporting of a force of 40,000 men or more, over 6,000 miles. The tonnage required has been calculated at about 275,000, since in 1879 eighteen steamers of 55,000 tons displacement were needed to transport, 8,100 men and 1,850 horses to the Cape. The last big expedition despatched by Great Britain was that of 1882 to Egypt. Then 19,148 men and 5,900 horses were sent out in forty-seven steamers of 140,000 tons. No other country in the world could at a moment's notice provide the shipping the Admiralty is likely to require.

The opinion that malaria is conveyed to human beings by mosquitoes has long been held by the Somali of East Africa, according to information given in Wickenburg's "Wanderungen in Ostafrika."

We point to our testimonials in proof of the value of K. D. C. The high standing of the writers is a guarantee of the genuineness and undoubted excellence of our preparation.

Albert C. Smith, Esq., President of the Suffolk Dispensary, 10 Charles St., Boston, writes: "We are glad to say a good word for K. D. C., having given the preparation every possible test. We have each day large numbers who apply to us for medical treatment and as may be supposed many of them are very pronounced chronic cases and are somewhat difficult to cure. They belong to a class who look for immediate results and our experience with your valuable compound proves that in a very few days the patient expresses relief and later a complete restoration of the digestive powers. I should be unwilling to carry on our work without this preparation always on hand."

It was current newspaper report a few months ago that Mark Twain was writing an autobiography, and that it would not be published for a hundred years. The nineteenth century closes with 1900. Immediately after midnight, therefore of December 31, 1900, is when the twentieth begins. In other words, it begins with the first second of the first hour of the first day of January, 1901. The twentieth will open on a Tuesday and close on a Sunday. It will have the greatest number of leap years possible for a century—twenty-four. The year 1904 will be the first one, then every fourth year after that to and including the year 2000, February will three times have five Sundays; in 1920, 1948 and 1976. "When I was young, and lived up in the mountains of New Hampshire, I worked for a farmer, and was given a span of horses to plow with, one of which was a four-year-old. The colt, after walking a few steps, would lie down in the furrow. The farmer was provoked, and told me to sit on the colt's head, to keep him from rising while he whipped him to break him of that notion, as he said. But just then a neighbor came by. He said, 'There's something wrong here; let him get up and let us find out what is the matter.' He patted the colt, looked at the harness, and then said, 'Look at his collar; it is so long and narrow, and carries the harness so high, that when he begins to pull it slips back and chokes him, so he can't breathe.' And so it was; and but for that neighbor we should have whipped as good a creature as we had on the farm, because he lay down when he could not breathe."

Boys, always remember that all animals can not make their wants known. Think before you strike any creature that can not speak."—The Children's Friend.
