GOT THE MOVING HABIT. THE WHARF IN LINE WITH FIRST OF MAY REMOVALS.

Is the Connolly Structure Infected With the Yearly Shuffle—The Ferce of the Tides Behled the Wharf the Alleged Gauss of this Movement,

The Connolly wharf at Sand Point is The Connolly wharf at Sand Point is going out. This may be a somewhat startling statement, yet it is true. The wharf and warehouses are gradually but surely moving out, and it is but a question of time before another catastrophe will happen at the winter port wharf. In the first week of Oxtober last year, when there were crowds of men working on the Sand Point improvements, the idea was ridiculed that the structure being raised was insecure and unsafe. But a few days later all the work of structure semy raised was inscoure and un-sale. But a few days later all the work of the summer, all the timber, stone and gravel moved bodily into the channel, where some

So it will be with the Connolly wharf, unless steps are taken at once to prevent it. Any one who takes the trouble to visit this structure at full tide and remains patiently watchirg till low water, will see behind the wharf a very peculiar motion of the earth and gravel, sand and silt. He will see this talting in at certain times, not as dropping into a hole, but gradually settling down, telling plainly that the whole bodylot earth at the bottom of the wharf on the rock bed below, is shifting its

Then again the movement may be told from the position of the whart face. It has not only moved out, but it has assumed such a position that the outer face is er from the perpendicular than it was, ing that the wharf is moving out much we at the bottem then at the top, thus was out of position, yet the city council disputed this and said it was in the axact position that Connelly placed it. But there are many sharp observers outside the cuncil, and two out of every three men whe live and do business in that vicinity will affirm plainly and forcibly that this wharf has gone out. It was doubted, but there is every evidence that the doubt will become a reality unless something prevents. It may be that the dredging that has been going on for some time has some-thing to do with it; it may be that the the present movement, but certain it is whart is going out.

cause of this movement is the force of the tides behind the wharf acting as a wedge. Hundreds of tons of water, forced by the heavy tides, press in behind this whart, and as water has an equal pressure on all sides the strain put upon this wharf is some-thing terrible. Nothing could stand it. Then to this may be added the fact that the wharf sits upon sand in a great measure, and this is being gradworked on by the water, and consequently shifting its position. To this may be added the fact that the dredge makes a channel or dumping place for the earth that the tide is moving, and you have a very satisfactory reason to advance by the whart is going out.

It was in Ostober that the late wharf catastrophe happened.—There on Sunday morning the people were astonished to see the work of months gone to naught. They could not understand how such a thing could happen—yet happen it did and the reason was that gravity and other natural laws had been violated. It had been decided to build that wharf without contract; it had been decided to build the wharf on plans that the city engineer would not guarantee stable, and then despite repeated warnings from responsible men the dredge was set about to undermine the structure while hundreds of tons of earth were thrown in bahind to aid in the work of destructi in behind to aid in the work of destruction.

The same obstinacy will put the Connolly wharf in the sea. It must be apparent to all that the city council should take steps to prevent this catastrophe. A stop should be put at once to any dredging or rock blasting near the Connolly wharf, and no more earth should be filled in behind the wharf. A break water or thus crowding it out. There is no burning necessity row, that the Sand point wharf necessity row, that the Sand point wharf should be hurried. The winter port season is over and since little has been done in wharf builditg since October, a period of six months except holding meeting, accepting plans and then discarding them for others, a few weeks further delay will do no injury to the interests of the city, and the time can be very profitably spent and the time can be very profitably spent in making the present wharf safe. How this can be best done the engineer will probably decide, but certainly no time should be lost in securing an investigation, making a critical examination and taking steps to guard the Connolly wharf.

This catastrophe that is surely impending should be a warning to the council not to build a whart on the present plans by days work, and against the desires and expressed opinion of the engineer.

That gentleman drew place for a wharf wi h counter-torts, that he was willing to guarantee would stand the strain of the tides He was anxious that the council should build on those lines; but they refused and instead ordered plans for a whart entirely different in structure, entirely different in size, and the result was that Mr. Peters could not guarantee its statili y. To make the matter worse the council has decided to build the whart by days work, on plans that curnot be recommended. Is it not flying in the face of nature and practical science to thus play with the city's best in-terests? The citizens demand now that the council call a special meeting, decide on plans guaranteed by Ergineer Peters or some other engineer, and then give the recoup the city for any loss that may pos-sibly follow. This is certainly the desire of the people, and it is strange indeed that the souncil should then fly in the face of all nolly whari danger could be con-sidered, an examination ordered and pond, but a wreck is certain to come soon-er or later, unless immediate steps are taken to contract it, and even now it may be too late to avert the danger.

THE COLONEL WAS MAD. Because The Official Talked of "Queen Looking People."

is part of a gentleman. There is a general politeness that never deserts a man, no matter in what position is lite he may be placed—there is also a certain dignity that should follow an official whether he be in civic, provincial or federal life.

A few days since at Ottawa a case occurred where this question of official eti-quette came very vividity to the front. A young man of Kings county was appointed to work in one of the departments. The young man in question was well recommend-od and had all the qualities and characteristics of a gentleman. He also knew what was due to those whom he considered his superiors. When he went to the capital he expected to receive gentlemanly treatment but such was not the case.

ut such was not the case. Colonel Domville took him in charge and they set out on around of the offices On the way they came to the one presided over by the dostor in question when the following scene occurred. As soon as they entered the door and before they had time to speak the erder came "take off your hats."

This was a salute they were not expect-ing and consequently the Colonel's ire rose at once and he proposed to slaughter the official. "How dare you," said the Colonel "address me in that way. Do you know I am a member of parliament ?"

No heed was paid to this question the order coming again with greater force: "Take off your hat."

"Take off your hat."
"Who are you addressing, you bald headed old rascal," said the Colonel, "I'll report you to the house. I'll learn you the respect due your superiors.

Turning to his friend, the colonel said. "Keep on your hat; don't take it off till I tell you to."

And the King's county boy kept his hat

onel who was angry before was now mad clean through, and in his best style, as though leading a charge in the Soudan, he advanced to that official, after pulling his plug hat down hard on his head.

He placed his finger and thumb within an inch of the offi halancee and suid," You disgraceful remnant of offi zialdom, you ta'l to a member of parliment in that style?

Do you not know that I can keep on my Do you not know that I can keep on my hat in any place because of my position?
Do you know that you have insulted my friend and if you don't apoligize for it at once I will have you brought before the house, you upstart and smeak.
Don't tell me that you didn't know who I was, that makes no difference it would be interested. ce—it would be just the same in any case; you have no business to forget the courtesy due to gentlem in, and if you don't know what is due, I will take it in hand to teach you."

The colonel was out of breath by this time and while he was "fetching" another, the offi ial gasped: "I am sure you will excuse me. I did not know who you were, there are so many queer looking people going the rounds of the offices that I canno; tall what to do." He didnt get time to finish. Toe words "Queer looking people" set the colonel off again, and he hit the desk a crack with his fist that upset the inkbottle and made the little official jump out of his seat. "Queer looking people!

Do you dare to continue your insults," raged the colonel, "I will lay this whole matter before the house just so sure as you sit there. I'll teach you that you don't know as much as you think you do, I'll see if they are going to have a I'll see if they are going to have a bureau around here," and in his rage he seized the King's county boy jammed his hat down over his eyer and stumped out to feel Lamies.

Did the colonel use any classical phrases In septy to this query it is said he talked in the Greek language for three hours after he resched his ho tel.

ARTER MR. H. H. BANKS.

HALIPAX, April 8.—The temperance people have poured out the vials of their wrath on H. H. Bauks for his alleged nonenforcement of the liquor license law in this city. Progress had never much to say in favor of Mr. Bank's work; it never said he was an exceedingly faithful officer. The was an exceedingly faithful officer. The There is etiquette and etiquette, there is may be that the ething to do with an corrain it is the peculiar decorum that should not certain the peculiar decorum that should not certain the peculiar decorum that ple are down on Mr. Banks.

D. W. B. Reed is the license inspector in this county, outside the city. Seldom is a complaint heard of him from the people who grumble most about Brother Banks. seems somewhat pecular. The County Municipal Council, which has been in session this week has raised its voice regarding this matter. First they got on him regarding his charge and the charges of constables employed by him. Then they branched off to general principles. Counciller Henley said it was a shame that the county should be burdened with such an officer. He did not like to talk about him behind his back, he said, but he was prepared to show that there is more drinking in the county, at least in his section, than before the inspector began his work. Councillor Henley concluded by dwelling on the increased drinking at his headquarters—Spry Bay.

Then Worden Shatford took up his parable in the same direction, by remarking in the terse manner for which he is famed that in one district that he knew of and which he named, there are three places where ,liquor is sold. One of them is licened, the others are not. The licened house does the smallest business. Any one who travels through many parts of the county can bear testimony to what the warden and councillor Henley said, while at the same time it can also be said that there are sections where it is impossible to buy liquor for drinking pur-

It thus appears that bad as Insp Banks may appear in the eyes of city tem-perance people, that Inspector Reid stands but little better in the county.

The Teachers Harrassed by Having Tiny Children Sent to Them to be Taken Care of—As Appeal Wil be Made to the Govern-ment to Rescind the Law.

Quite a breezy of excitement was caused seacher in carrying out a regulation of the ion. Why should she not do so ?-it may be asked. It seems that were behind the times and that great injury was being done the primary schools by converting them into nurseries, request-ed the Board of Education to enact that new pupils should be admitted only at certain times. It was accordingly done and it worked satisfactorily until a certain under official came upon the scene and announced in advance that these pupils were to be admitted at all times.

The teacher in question on being presented with a permit explained very courtcously that her school was already very full, in fact that she had more pupils than seats, and that her entire time and attention was required to fit those she had to advance, and make room tor others, and that it would be only a short time to wait; beside, the pupil was very young and it would be an advantage for him to remain out a couple of months and make a fair beginning. She also stated that it was ontrary to the regulation of the government to admit new pupils at this time. The parent was obdurate, however, saying "she did not want the bother of the child around home" and proceeded to the office om which she soon returned with the perway of in lucing respect for authority.

The teacher gave the pupil a seat but did not curell him claiming that also could not

It is said that an appeal will be made to in its entirety. The chairman of the School Board is understood to have given out that children should be admitted at all times, and that the regulation is contrary to

The chairman is perhaps not so much to blame, as he is supposed to give effect to the advance notices, before referred to. It all the towns on the continent are transgressors. The teachers say that if it is contrary to law it is in entire accord with common sense and that no complaint would have been made if it had not been for the extra officiousness of a clerk who is never weary of prollaiming his efforts "to pop-ularizathe schools. It has become a standing joke among the teachers, generally with the mental reservation that the official in question is on the wrong side of the counter to render the schools in any way popular if such a thing were needed.

It is said that the chairman is acting on his own responsibility in the matter as it is by no means certain that all the members of the Board or even a majority of them are in accord with him. One teacher remarked that there was great danger of the practices of a quarter of a century ago being reintroduced in this city and remarked quaintly that "every approach to the Board was studded with fossils."

It is stated also that nearly all the pripresent patrons of the schools.

If pupils can be allowed to come in a any time they may as well be allowed to bring along their cradles and playthings, and day nurses employed to assist the teachers to care for them. Bring them along at any age and at any time and let St John be an example to the cities of the earth.

The primary teachers, who are a unit infavor of the regulation, held a meeting on Friday to make representation to the Board.

They rightly consider that if they have the confidence of the trustees they will regard their manifestos as being in the best interests

ALMOST LOST THE POSITION.

HALIFAX, April, 8 .- The Sunday street cars are running as regularly in Halifax as if there were no ominous clouds such as the Sabbath observance association threatening them with actions at law and vigorous sto page of the traffic.

Notwithstanding the campaign that has been inargurated against the Sanday street cars in this city by the Sabbath association, and the fact that this association is largely made up of ministers and staunch church people, the clergy of Halifax are by no means unanimous in refusing to coun ance the street cars. Some of the ministers go so far as to use them on Sanday. Oa the other hand there are men in Halifax who will not use the cars at all, on any day in the week, as a protest against their "desecration of the Sabbath." Some rather harsh things have been said by non car using clerics regarding their brethren who looked at the matter through such different glasses, as to allow them to speed

What follows, however, treats n anti-clerical harshoess, but of what looks something like seventeenth century rigor from a minister towards one over whom he church. He is an outspoken champion of the anti-Sunday car torces and he has the courage of his convictions to a remarkable de gree —both inside and outside his pulpit. There is no mistaking the meaning of his frequent sermons on this question nor of his carnest precepts every day in the wack bearing on this "evil" as he believes it to be, and as vary possibly it is, at least from the standpoint of employees who work in the power house and on the road seven ome weeks in search of an organist, at last one was found, whom everybody concerned thought would answer admirably, in a young lady from the far south-end, two miles away from the church. The contract with her was about being closed when the pastor learned that her residence was so very far distant from the place of worsh and he remarked to her that she might find it wearisome to walk so far twice every Sabbath, and asked how. She propose to overcome the disadvantage of the great distance. The young lady, no: having learned of the extreme views en'ertained by the minister on the Sanday car ques-

"Ah I can walk in summer and in fine weather without trouble. On rainy days, The minister's countenance fell, as instinctively he concluded that the young lady, no matter how great her musical accomplishments, nor how suitable she might be in every other respect, would not do as organist of his church. No such musical argument against his sermons and his daily agitation could be permitted as an organist who instead of walking two miles to church and two back, twice a Sabbath, a total of eight miles, would take the street cars.
This he intimated to the disappointed candidate for the position, much to her regret and sorrow. Tae young lady was told she might walk and secure the position, but ride to it she would not be permitted to do.
Such was the ultimatum that the church members, who had long patiently awaited the engagement of a good organist, learned had been issued in this case. Yet its terms must have been modified, or else the young lady acquiesced in it, for she was installed in the position and everyhody said she played very well indeed. A careful scrutiny of the minister's countenance many schools are now overcrowded and it new pupils be sent to fill the seats of those already belonging, and take away their chances of grading, that there will be a row of very large dimensions among the whether he had surrendered or she had compitulated, or whether there had been a

The real explanation of the appearance of the organist in her official capacity in the church is that the young lady capitulated to the minister and agreed to abide by his ultimatum. She felt she could not walk the distance but rather than loss the organ she agreed to change her boarding house from south to north-end so as to be near the church, and to avoid the possibility. The real explanation of the appearance
