LAWYERS AGAIN IN WARM SESSION

Probate Court Room Scene of Differences Between Messrs. Mullin and Bustin

ALL DAY PROCEEDINGS

Argument of Counsel Heard—Decision of Court is Reserved—Some of the Nice Things Which Were Said.

In the probate court Monday, in the matter of the estate of Mary B. Gilbert, there were again warm passages between Mr. Mullin and Mr. Bustin, counsel engaged.

Mr. Bustin moved that Mr. Mullin's allegations be eliminated from the files for several reasons. He said that Mr. Mullin had renewed his caveat, and then referred to Section 6 of Mr. Mullin's allegations in which it was set out that Mr. W. C. Gaynor had been suspended by the bishop of St. John for gross immorality and also that he continued to wear the Roman collar and the garb of a priest after he was an unlicensed priest.

Mr. Mullin replied that after having been suspended by the bishop of St. John he had been reinstated by the bishop of St. John, and that he had been reinstated by the bishop of St. John, and that he had been reinstated by the bishop of St. John.

Mr. Bustin quoted several authorities regarding the rules and practice of pleading and moved that Mr. Bustin be no longer permitted to practice before the court in this case. He said the pleadings were impertinent and that someone had to be put to the test.

Mr. Mullin in reply said that after having been reinstated by the bishop of St. John he had been reinstated by the bishop of St. John, and that he had been reinstated by the bishop of St. John.

LOCAL NEWS

Registrar Jones reports twelve marriages during last week, also seven births. Five of the babies are boys.

The steamer Hampstead has made her last trip for the season between Georgetown and Fredericton and returned to Indian-town yesterday.

Mr. William Cruikshank left for Fredericton on Saturday to enter upon his new duties in the department of the provincial secretary.

At Chubb's on Saturday Antoinette Lantano sold the Richard B. Stackhouse farm, with buildings, etc., to Edwin N. Kim, who left in search of a position in this country, who left two weeks ago, and left his wife at home, and she was located as a stock buyer, and finally located the woman at Pinkney, Ark., where she had taken refuge with a married sister.

The husband had given her $700 a week for her living, but most of this money is in an Oakland City (Ind.) bank. Having lost her check book, Mrs. Kim was almost without resources when she discovered her hiding place. She wore good clothes when she left home, but these had become badly soiled in the two weeks and he could hardly believe she was the same woman.

She confessed to having left home because of her love for her girlhood sweetheart, John McArnold, whom she was prevented from marrying by her father when she was sixteen. McArnold later when she married another woman and the latter had died, leaving him a family of children, she had returned to her father's home to rear her love for her, she said. McArnold had caused her to abandon her Indiana home to join her former sweetheart in Arkansas. She begged her husband with tears and kisses to return to his old home and to forget and forgive her.

This so angered Kim that he decided to go to the farm of McArnold and "settle" with him. He procured a horse and a wagon and set out on his journey to the farm of McArnold. He told him he was a stockman and wished a price on his calves. In the course of the conversation McArnold became confidential with the supposed stockman and related to him the story of his marriage, and adding wife a few months previously, and adding that just a week before one of his children had died. He said that all he had, besides some worthless Arkansas land, was a few head of cattle on the farm. He felt his loss so heavily that tears streamed down his face as he related the story of his life to the man who had come to settle on the farm. He had done to both himself and his family.

Disclosing his identity, Kim suddenly bade the man who raised his indignation farewell, returned to Pinkney, where he again saw his wife, and bidding her farewell, started for his home. In telling the story to a friend at the station he said: "When I went to McArnold's farm I had murder in my heart. I had planned to kill him, but I thought that if he loved his services worse than I, but on giving her up I lost everything that was dear to me in this world." Kim has returned to his farm west of this city and has already consulted lawyers and will bring divorce proceedings against his wife at once, so that he may have a chance to see her again.

Any person who drinks 25c tea and once tastes the "Salada" will find that it is not only finer in flavor, but that it is economical to use.
