and clergymen of all denominations urged their people to forget themselves in serv-ing others. Altogether, Christmas in St. John not only with those who enjoy a large share of this world's goods but for others less favorably situated, was a season to look back upon with pleasant mem-

r ories. In all the institutions in the city for those who have been unfortunate in life, Christmas was a red letter day. In the Home for Incurables, the Protestant Orphans' Home, the Boys' Industrial Home, Crouchville, and the Deaf and Dumb In-stitution, Lancaster, there were magnifi-cent Christmas trees with preasits for all. In St. Patrick's Boys' Industrial School, Silver Falls, and the Municipal Home, all the inmates were treated to a dinner al-most equal to what was served in many hotels. There was a religious service in the jail conducted by members of the Sal-vation Army, and, following his annual custom, Sheriff Ritchie served up a dinner to each of his unwilling guests which went far towards making them forget their con-dition.

In the General Public Hospital a fine dinner was served to such of the patients

The Wealth of Nations, tells us how, in the manufacture of pins, one man working alone could certainly not make more than twenty pins in a day, while ten men working together, and each the rest would do theirs, were found able to turn out 48,000 pins in a day, or 4,300 apiece. So that by working together each man working together each man working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as if he had been working together each man's power became 240 times as great as difter being on her for half an hour, the transmation is not stopy, were shiftled to turn out 48,000 pins in a day, of 4,500 and all other manufacture clothes and all other mereasaries of life, are pro-vided in a way which would he impossible "independently."
