

Donuts and Gomushi tangled in hair controversy

"my glamour boy days are over"

Following The White Paper, The Purple Paper and the Blueprint for Action, a new controversy has arisen; the most complex issue yet, the colour and length of CYSF president-elect Jeann Gomushi's hair.

In a debate held last week in the east bearpit, CYSF president Peter Donuts defended dark brown as the only hair colour suitable for politicians. "We dark-haired students must unite to fight against the injustices of light-brown and blonde hair," he said, as he waved a comb valiantly in the air.

Gomushi, the proud owner of a head of long light-brown, dark-brown hair defended his position against Donuts proudly. "Unite to fight for our hair's rights!" he exclaimed, as the other members of his rock group Short Old Shacks surrounded him. It should be noted that, of his bandmates, only Steve 'n' Lance had hair that even approached Gomushi's in length.

Georgio, top hairdresser for Onde Hair Design was on hand to comment on the proceedings. "Well, I don't know who is right," he said. "If they choose short hair as 'official' for York, that would mean more business for us. But, if they pick long, imagine the money we would make with styling!"

The highly charged debate went on through the afternoon, with Donuts noting the dark-haired presence of Ronald Reagan as good for the United States, and Gomushi emphasizing that long haired Jon Bon Jovi would make a good leader, if he was even considered for nomination. "That's just another element in the long standing conspiracy against us," he said. "Unite to fight for long hair's rights!"

In a rebuttal, the Short Hair Independence Team (SHIT), a group of renegade students with scissors, fought on the side of Donuts. Their leader, a small bald guy affectionately referred to as Shiny, stood on a stack of five phone books to speak. He said that Gomushi was crazy and should be removed from his position as soon as possible, and emphasized that Buddy Holly was the only "musical celebrity" ever capable of leading an "educational institution."

As to his musical ambitions, Gomushi could only comment that his music would take on a more political stance in September. He wants all of York to know that his glamour boy days are over, as Short Old Shacks will be taking a position "somewhere between Springsteen and U2."

Indeed, based on his album covers, Gomushi will make a poor leader indeed, as Donuts amply pointed out. Waving a copy of Passion in Your Eye, he passed photocopies of Gomushi's portrait around. "Look at those locks!" he said. "This is worse than any other issue on campus."

Chanting, "Cut his hair. Cut his hair" over and over, Donuts and his follower moved through Central Square.

Gomushi fought his point valiantly, saying that the members of Platinum Blonde were more capable of leading York than president Hairy Armpits.

The chipmunk, Excalibur's mascot, arrived on the scene in late afternoon to speak before the crowd. He also spoke after the crowd. He thinks the whole debate is pointless and dumb. "I thin the whole debate is pointless and dumb," he said. "I think they should both just go hide in cave and hibernate."

PROTEST

by Hugh Betcha

The University Food Services Committee, despite having proposed a scrip plan for the 1990-91 academic year, staged a protest yesterday in Central Square against students' March 26 protest.

Students responded by protesting the UFSC Protest, and the UFSC soon struck back by staging a sit-in in Winters cafeteria. A group of students then protested the sit-in, and eventually Winters cafeteria staff went on strike to protest all the protesters getting in their way. Winters students protested the strike by marching on the cafeteria, only to find that a lock-out had been set up on protest of their march.

Students plan to protest the lock-out early tomorrow, alongside an environmental group's protest against the use of non-recyclable materials in student protest placards.
