Milk Fever

Henry Glendinning, apostle of alfalfa and the Jersey cow, and A. C. Hallman, one of the fathers of the Canadian Holstein-Friesian Association, were recently seated by the editor's desk talking cow. The discussion drifted around to milk fever, and incidentally Mr. Glendinning made a good point that is well worth remembering.

"I haven't had a case of milk fever in 30 years," said Mr. Glendinning,

One of the Choice Matrons in a Recently Established Herd

Helene Hengerveld Keyes 3rd, here illustrated, has a four-year-old record of 39.73 lbs. of milk, 669 lbs. of fat and 761.35 lbs. of butter in 12 months in Record of Performance test. This is the second best record for the age in Canada. The holder of the best record is owned in the same herd, that of Mr. Jos. O'Reilly, Ennismore, Ont., and is illustrated below.

"Until last week, I was away in Toronto at the time or we wouldn't have had even that case. One of the cows freshened with a very large udder. After allowing the calf to suck, my herdsmen took some milk out by hand, which he should not have done. The vet. got there just ahead of me and applied the air treatment, and six hours later the cow was on her feet and eating."

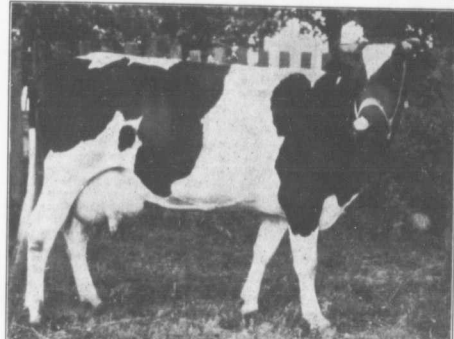

"It's a wonderful treatment," commented Mr. Hallman. "I have lost a few rows in my time with milk

The Ideal Dairy Farm

By Theodore Mucklin

Dairy farming is intensive farming and permanent farming. The renter has no real conception of permanent farming unless it be the desire that some day after he has possibly mined enough money from wearing out his own. Successful dairying calls for intensity and permanency. It is essentially the little things done well instead of a large farm poorly managed. For a farmer to actually improve a farm and build up a strong dairy herd and construct serviceable and practical barns, milk houses and the other necessities of a successful dairy he must own the farm. He must feel a pride in his work—the pride that he is building a monument not to himself alone, but one which will continue to lift the standards of agriculture after he has passed away. It must be a desire to create a beautiful farm—a fertile spot

The Only 20,000 Pound Four-Year-Old in Canada

This is Burkey's Hengerveld, 20,177 lbs. of milk and 635 lbs. of fat, which on an 80 per cent fat basis, represents 761 lbs. of butter in Record of Performance test. This is another of the choice matrons in move, Ont. More about the herd of this gossip columns this week.—Photos by an editor of Farm and Dairy.

where his children can step in and live after his time is run out. And dairy farming is the key to this permanent agriculture. The crops raised are sent through the dairy machines—the cows—and the fertilizing elements are largely retained for the farm while at the same time the condensed product thus the more easily handled, is sold at an enhanced price.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.
