Accordingly the sense of originality, which was so fervently demanded from every new school of writers, would force the poets of the future to sweep away all recognized impressions. In consequence the natural uses of the English and the obvious forms of English speech would be driven from the national poetry. In new perations there was likely to occur less intion of plain material objects, because the aspect of these had already received every obvious tribute.

Also there could hardly fail to be less recise enumeration of the primitive atural emotions, because that also had been done already and repeated to satiety. Poetry as an art, in one shape or another, would escape from the bankruptcy of language, but it would only be at the cost sors for politi?cal reasons and coersion in
