No sign is made while empires pass.
The flowers and stars are still His care,
The constellations hid in grass,
The golden miracles in air.
Life in an instant will be rent
Where death is glittering blind and wild—
The Heavenly Brooding is intent
To that last instant on its child.
It breathes the glow in brain and heart,
Life is made magical. Until
Body and spirit are apart
The Everlasting works its will.
In that wild orchid that your feet
In their next falling shall destroy,
Minute and passionate and sweet
The Mighty Master holds His joy.
Though the crushed jewels droop
and fade
The artist's labours will not cease,
And of the ruins shall be made
Some yet more lovely masterpiece.

I See His Blood Upon The Rose
I see His blood upon the rose,
And in the stars the glory of His eyes.
His body gleams amid eternal snows
His tears fall from the skies.
I see His face in every flower;
The thunder and the singing of the birds
Are but His words—and carved by His hands
Rocks are His written words.
All pathways by His feet are worn,
His strong heart stirs the ever-heating sea,
His crown of thorns is twined with every thorn,
His cross is every tree.

The older priest smiled and shook his head slowly two or three times. "The Bishop would have been content with the soup, fish and fruit. You know, for years he was a priest on the mission. He has been accustomed to roughing it more than half his life. It must have cost you quite a lot."
Father Joe swallowed quickly then remarked calmly: "Over twenty dollars, Father, for the three meals the Bishop had with me. Some of the things I did have to buy. I don't mind expense, but nothing seemed to please the Bishop. In the evening, he complained of the darkness of the hall. I had never thought to buy a lamp for the hall; there was none there when I came, and I managed to get along without one. I was obliged to go to the sacristy for an old lamp that was there, and it took some little time to clean and prepare it for lighting."
"Then in the morning the Bishop spoke to me of the necessity of keeping the altar linens clean. I had them all washed last week, except the surplice I was wearing. I had forgotten all about it, as it was the one that hangs in the sacristy—I had never worn it outside till that morning. I had given the clean surplices to the other two priests, so I was obliged to wear the soiled one. All the other church linen was spotless."
"I would not mind these things so much, Father, but I fear the Bishop did not feel satisfied with the children's knowledge of catechism. I had instructed them for six weeks and I thought them well prepared, but after the examination, the Bishop made no comment."
"But do you mean to say that you were not present while the Bishop was examining your children?" asked Father McGuire in surprise.
Father Joe nodded his head slowly, then said: "No, Father, I wasn't there. A man from the quarry called to see me about some stone we were buying to repair the foundation of the church, and he kept me so long talking that when I returned, the Bishop had finished examining the candidates and had begun to robe for the confirmation ceremony."

Pains in the Back
The symptoms of a weak, torpid or astringent condition of the kidneys or bladder, and are a warning of an extremely serious and important condition. They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.
"I was taken ill with kidney trouble, and came so weak I could scarcely get around, took medicine without benefit, and finally decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After that bottle I felt so much better that I ordered the use, and six bottles made me a new man. When my little girl was a year, she could not sleep anything on her back, and we gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, which cured her." Mrs. Thomas L. Wallace, Ontario.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
The young priest ceased speaking, Father McGuire said for the second time: "If only you had come over to see me before! You should have been present when the Bishop was questioning the children. Your presence there would have given them confidence. The Bishop has a special method of examining them. He does not wish to have any long answers; so he asks his question, so that the answer will be nearly always 'yes' or 'no'." Now a week ago, when the Bishop was here, although I knew my little ones were well prepared, I feared they might be a little nervous seeing the Bishop standing there in his great purple cassock and hearing his great solemn voice, so I just stood behind him, and when the answer was in the affirmative, I just nodded my head, and, of course, this gave the little ones confidence, and they answered quickly and clearly 'yes.' And when the answer was in the negative, I just shook my head slowly from side to side, and they answered 'no,' without the slightest hesitation. The Bishop was pleased with them.
The young priest burst out laughing, and the other priest regarded him with those smiling eyes that the children knew so well. Father Joe was beginning to feel glad that he had come to visit Father McGuire.
When the two friends went in to supper, they talked of different things, but towards the close of the meal, the conversation veered around again to the Bishop's visit, and the young man remarked that he would feel very happy if only he knew that the Bishop had been pleased with his children.
Father McGuire looked at him wide-eyed. "Why," he said, "do you mean to tell me that you don't know what the Bishop thought of your children?"
The young man swallowed and looked quickly at Father McGuire, wondering where he had failed now; then he nodded his head and said: "Yes, Father."
"Why, it is in the book; in your parish register, where the births and marriages are recorded," said the older priest, and he stood up quickly and he went into his little study. He returned immediately with a large quarto, black-covered volume, with a small square piece of white canvas bearing the words "Births and Marriages" pasted on it. He opened it and read one sentence from the Bishop's account of his visit to Clark's Cove, which ran thus: "And after examining the children, we found them well prepared."
Father McGuire looked at the young man and quoted: "Well prepared! Well prepared! Every time he comes he always finds them well prepared."
For a long time that evening after Father Joe had gone, Father McGuire sat at his desk in his little office. Now and then he would shake his head slowly and smiled quietly to himself. He was thinking of the young priest and wishing that he had only come to him to be initiated for the Bishop's visit. Then suddenly he stopped smiling as he thought that perhaps the Bishop had not written "Well prepared." If so, it would be just one thing more to worry this young man who took things so seriously.
When old Mary brought his lamp into his study and placed it on his desk, he looked into the brown wrinkled face of his little

"It's an awful thing to be young," Mary said.
She looked at him out of the shrewd old gray eyes that had looked at many priests in the past. Then she said, with the dignity befitting the oldest priest's housekeeper in the diocese: "You were young yourself once." Then she continued: "I suppose Father Joe is worrying over the supper he had for the Bishop. It's a pity he didn't come over to see me before the visit—I could have told him just what to have."
Old Mary had heard about the elaborate supper from a woman whose little girl had helped Father Joe's housekeeper during the Bishop's visit.
"Well," said Father McGuire, "I think he is just a little; but he is troubled more with the thought that the Bishop has not found his children well prepared."
"Ah!" exclaimed the old housekeeper, "he shouldn't worry over that. Mrs. Kelly told me that he worked harder with the children than any priest before him. When the children would begin to be fidgety, he would take them all outside and have races for the boys and races for the girls. He would put a stick of peppermint candy on a post, and the one to reach the post first could take the candy."
Father Joe did not examine the register that night, but the next morning after breakfast he took the book out on the veranda and sat down. The waves were dancing in the sunlight and the fleet was beginning to put to sea. Down along the shore a group of children were playing on the sands near the craft, that was hauled up high and dry on the shore to be repaired. He felt just a little nervous about opening the book. He feared that the words "well prepared" might not be written there. He sat a little while watching the children, some of whom had been confirmed during the week. Then he opened the book, and this is what he read:
"On the 10th of August, 19—, the Feast of St. Lawrence the Martyr, after having said Mass in the parish church of Larnooon, we examined the one hundred and twenty children, who were candidates for Confirmation. Owing to the weather, the young people we found them very well prepared."
The young pastor read no more, for a slight film was coming over his eyes. Then two tears slipped down his cheeks and he said gratefully: "God bless the Bishop."

Hot Flashes, Fainting Spells, So Weak and Nervous Could Not Sleep.
Mrs. Philip H. Ryan, Sand Point, N.B., writes: "I have been a great sufferer from nerve trouble. I was so weak and nervous I could not sleep at night, and my appetite was very poor. I could not walk across the floor without trembling all over. I had hot flashes and fainting spells. When I was on my second box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I began to feel better and kept on until I had used six boxes when I felt like a different person. I am never without them in the house and recommend them to all who suffer with their nerves."

Announcement..
For the information of our many patrons, in both town and country, we deem it necessary to announce that the Coal Business, successfully carried on in the past by the late Mr. Charles Lyons, will be continued by the Estate, under the old firm name of C. Lyons & Co.
By maintaining a high standard of service and by courteous and honest treatment of the public, this firm has, for a period of more than a quarter of a century, enjoyed a large and ever-increasing patronage; and in announcing our intention of "carrying on," we desire, most earnestly, to give expression to our appreciation thereof. We are deeply grateful to the firm's many patrons for their constant manifestation of confidence in it in the past; and we assure them that if they favor us with a similar evidence of their good-will in future there shall be no economy of effort on our part to make our intercourse both pleasant and profitable to them.
As we possess almost unlimited facilities for supplying the coal trade, and as we are desirous of extending our already large business, we respectfully invite the patronage of new customers; and if we succeed in thus increasing our present connection, we guarantee that we shall be indefatigable in our endeavor to justify the confidence of our new friends.
We again thank our patrons for their past generous patronage, and respectfully solicit a renewal of their esteemed custom.

Canadian National Railways
OPERATING ONE HOUR EARLIER
Important Daylight Saving Change of Time at 2 a.m. Sunday, March 30, 1919
All clocks and watches used in operation of Canadian National Railway will at 2 a.m. Sunday, March 30th, be advanced one hour. To prevent serious confusion and inconvenience to the public the attention of all concerned is directed to the following conditions resulting from the important change of time:
If cities, towns, villages and other municipalities do not change their local time to correspond with the new Railway time, all concerned should keep in mind that while trains continue to leave Railway Stations on present schedule, such schedule will be operated one hour ahead of present local time. Therefore any municipality where local time is not changed to correspond with the new Railway time, passengers must reach Railway Station ONE HOUR EARLIER than shown in current folders and public time posters.
Where municipal time is changed to correspond with the new Railway time, passengers will not experience difficulty growing out of the change.
