

Quick Help for Strains and Sprains Wonderful Relief in One Hour

Rare Herb and Root Extracts in this Liniment Give it Marvellous Power.

RUB ON NERVILINE.

You'll be astonished at the rapid pain relieving action of "Nerviline." Its effectiveness is due to its remarkable penetrating power—it strikes deeply, sinks to the very core of the trouble.

Nerviline is stronger, many times stronger, than ordinary liniments, and it's not greasy, ill-smelling or disagreeable. Every drop rubs in, bringing comfort and healing wherever applied.

You would scarcely believe how it will relieve a sprain, how it takes out lameness, how it soothes and eases a bruise.

Thousands say no liniment is half so useful in the home. This must be so, because Nerviline is a safe remedy—you can rub it on even a child with fine results.

Just you keep Nerviline on hand—it's a panacea for the aches, pains and slight ills of the whole family. One bottle will keep the doctor's bill small, and can be depended on to cure rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica, toothache, pleurisy strains or swelling. Wherever there is a pain rub on Nerviline; it will always cure.

The large 50c family size bottle is the most economical; trial size 25c. Sold everywhere by dealers.

CHAPTER III.

"Harrison, did not need a word of this to make me know your faithful heart, and yet it has been pleasant to listen to you. But, Harrison, I gave you the money which you have prudently saved, for the very purpose of providing for you against this time. I knew it must come. It has come, and you must keep your money and enjoy it as a true man has a right to. As for me, do not give yourself any concern about me. My path is cut out for me, and I shall walk it smilingly. Not another word, now. I owe no man a penny. What is here you are to take. I shall be home to dress for dinner, and then shall not be home again until about two or three in the morning. I would like you to be here as usual, but when I have gone to bed I would like you to leave me and not return until the afternoon, when you may come and take these things away from here."

"It was a difficult thing to gainsay Sir Lionel, when his mind was made up to a course, and the valet only tottered back out of the room, and in a stupor of silence listened to his young master as he strode gayly out, humming a tune from "Carmen."

At the club that afternoon, and afterward at dinner, Sir Lionel held himself under such good control that no one could detect the least sign of anything unusual looming up before him. He was neither too gay nor too distraught—he was simply natural.

As was customary with him, he dined with a party of friends and acquaintances, and one of them proposed going afterward to the opera. He fell in with the idea, and as it was a Patti night he found everybody there—Lady Flora, of course.

He was always in demand in the boxes, and he went from one to the other until he came to the one in which Lady Flora sat, surrounded by the moths who were permitted to burn themselves at their own foolish pleasure. The Marquis of Gree was the nearest to her side, and so evidently the favored one that the others were rejoiced when Sir Lionel, in his easy, masterful way entered the box and calmly ignored the marquis and held the conversation captive. It was during the interlude between the first and second acts that he talked with Lady Flora. She was gracious, the fun rising fast and furious and the entertainment keeping in harmony with the spirits of the entertained. But never mind the details—it was a stupendous success.

It was some time after midnight that no new form of entertainment was introduced, and the supper party was alone with the wine. Many of the guests were the worse for their liberality in the matter of wine; but most of them were too well seasoned to give any indication of it. There was a lull. It was sudden. And presently each man discovered that he and everybody else was looking to where Sir Lionel sat at the head of the table, a smile hovering about his lips.

When he saw that he had the attention of his guests he rose from his chair and glanced slowly around the table. Not a chair was vacant, though a few of the occupants were frottering unsteadily.

"I trust," said Sir Lionel, "that I shall be forgiven for making a speech. I have never done it before."

"Hear, hear!" was murmured around the table, and every ear was bent to catch the words that were to fall from Sir Lionel's lips.

"The speech shall be short," he said. "I merely wish to say farewell. I will not say that I am sorry to say it. I have lived as swiftly as money would permit me to live, and I shall not linger or express sorrow now that I am about to close the door behind me. I am ruined. The last penny I have has gone to pay for this supper. Only, gentlemen, I do not owe a penny to a living soul. I bid you a joyous farewell."

Then, before the guests could recover from their astonishment and consternation, he had retired through a door which opened behind him. Something like a chill fell on them all, and when one of them—it was the Marquis of Gree—jumped up and ran to the door to go out, they all sprang up after him and followed as sheep will follow a leader.

But Gree had a definite plan of action in his mind, and the others had not; he did not stand in the cloak-room, staring and wondering and whispering, but threw on his hat and overcoat, and ran down stairs, jumped into a cab, and ordered the driver to take him to Lady Mordaunt's.

"I will spoil his sensation there," said the noble marquis to himself.

That is why Sir Lionel saw the marquis standing by the side of Lady Flora when he entered the drawing-room at Lady Mordaunt's. He made no show of being chagrined, but paid his respects to the hostess with his usual easy grace, and then made his way undisturbed to where Lady Flora sat. He could see that Gree had been forestalling him with his story, and could understand why. Jealousy had made him fear the effects of the story on the impressionable heart of Lady Flora.

He laughed internally at the idea of Lady Flora being moved in such a way, and made up his mind to give the marquis a bit of a fright for his littleness.

His progress to Lady Flora was not a rapid one, for every one must have a word with the famous Sir Lionel; but he kept his eye on her all the while, drawing nearer to her with the skill of one who knows the art of getting through a crowd. He saw how eagerly and rapidly Gree was talking, and how interestedly, even flatteringly, she listened.

"It is Gree's good fortune," he said to himself, "but I will frighten him a little by making love to her, too."

Then he saw her mother cross over to her and hand her a slip of paper. He could see her deprecatingly ask permission of Gree to read it, and then read it. He could see that she held the paper jealously close, and that she held her head bent for a brief space, as if commanding herself. Then was he mistaken, or did she resume the conversation with Gree with more of her usual haughtiness of manner?

Certainly, when he finally reached her side, she looked up with as radiant a smile as ever her beautiful face had worn for him, and her greeting was of the kindest. It was in the manner more than in the words, however, and he said to himself that her woman's heart was touched instead of being hardened by the story Gree had been telling.

ARE SIGNS OF INDIGESTION.

Indigestion—the complete or partial failure of the digestive processes—frequently throws out of gear the whole machinery of the body. You can't enjoy the vigor and vitality of good health unless your stomach, liver and bowels do their work regularly and efficiently.

MOTHER SEIGEL'S SYRUP

As a digestive tonic and stomachic remedy, Mother Seigel's Syrup is esteemed in tens of thousands of homes, wherever the English language is spoken. If you suffer much or little from disorders of the stomach, liver or bowels, try the effect of taking 15 to 30 drops of this famous remedy in water, after meals, for a few days and note its beneficial effects.

ASSISTS DIGESTION

The new 100c bottle contains three times as much as the trial size sold at 50c per bottle.

"I am glad you have kept your word," she said.

"It is a thing I have never broken," he said, in answer. "I am afraid, however, that the marquis has relieved me of the necessity of telling you a part of what I had to say."

"Oh, nothing the marquis has had the goodness to tell me," and she looked coldly at that gentleman, "can make me less eager to hear it, from your own lips. The marquis will excuse us, I am sure," and she took the arm which Sir Lionel, with ready wit, held out to her. "And you," she went on, with a smile, "will excuse my too eager curiosity, will you not?"

"If it be curiosity," he said.

She flashed a look into his eyes so full of sympathy, and more, even, that his heart gave a great bound, and for a moment he was speechless.

"It is not curiosity," she answered. "Shall we go into the conservatory? We shall be less liable to interruption there."

She did not know it, but for an infinitesimal space of time he hesitated. Then he threw prudence aside and said to himself:

"I can trust myself. I will go. But I am glad to have discovered that she has a heart. She understands and sympathizes."

Lady Flora's mother looked at them as they passed through the door to the conservatory, and muttered, with a smile:

"They will make a handsome pair. Flora was wisest in refusing to throw him aside."

CHAPTER IV.

It is always possible to find a nook in the conservatory where a conversation may be carried on without danger of listeners, for it is generally accepted that mamma or papa are the only ones authorized to interrupt a tete-a-tete in the conservatory.

Sir Lionel led Lady Flora through the avenues of palms and tropical plants, and nothing was said by either until he had seated her in a corner, partially hidden by the leaves of a banana plant.

"CONVALESCENTS" WHO DON'T GET WELL.

After a severe illness lots of people convalesce so slowly that they run the danger of becoming chronic invalids. The habit of ill-health is an easy one to acquire.

Yet it is an entirely unnatural habit and ninety-nine times out of a hundred an easy one to avoid.

Avoid drugs as though they were poison (so they are)—live naturally, drink lots of pure water—take some exercise every day in the open air—and with the help of Zoc-tic—nature will work its wonders in your health. For Zoc-tic feeds your hungry-over-drained nervous system like rare roast beef—soothes the anguish of a famished stomach. Its action is just as natural—just as beneficial.

Start taking Zoc-tic to-day—follow faithfully the directions and if in 2 weeks' time you can't report real progress toward natural health, return the unused portion of the bottle of Zoc-tic and we will refund your money without question.

1531 — A PRETTY FROCK FOR MOTHER'S GIRL.

Dress With or Without Plastron Trimming, and With Sleeve in Either of Two Lengths.

A good-looking school dress could be made from this model, of serge or wool poplin, with braid trimming and yoke facing of matched satin. For a best dress, soft batiste, dimity or organdy could be used, with lace or insertion and embroidery for trimming. The plastron may be omitted. The sleeve in wrist length has a band cuff. In short length it is to be finished with a narrow band, to fit the arm. This design is also good for voile, gabardine, challie, checked or plaid suiting, for galatese, percale, gingham, repp or chambray. The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes—4, 6, 8 and 10 years. It requires 4 yards of 36 inch material for an 8 year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

1517-1503—WAIST, 1517; SKIRT, 1503.

Two Attractive and New Styles.

This costume comprises Ladies' Waist Pattern 1517 and Ladies' Skirt Pattern 1503. Georgette crepe in a mauve shade with trimming of lace was used. The skirt is of serge in a shade to match the waist. Both styles are good for any of this season's dress materials.—The skirt of gabardine, wool poplin or broad cloth, with waist of charmeuse or taffeta, would be nice. The waist is also nice for linen, batiste, or nun's veiling. The Pattern is cut in 6 sizes—34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 3 3/4 yards of 54 inch material for a 24 inch size.

This illustration calls for TWO separate patterns which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district." He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the trinity of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them, I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is—well, mere child's play."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very unobtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness—all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances, by the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO X Lamp and GASTHEAM Radiators fill all light- and heat requirements.

TURKO-GERMAN EXPEDITION DELAYED.

LONDON, Jan. 14.
The Turko-German expedition against Egypt has been delayed but has not been abandoned. The railroad from Jerusalem has now been carried across the Sinai Desert and is only 50 miles from the Suez Canal. Supplies of water and provisions have been accumulated along the route the expedition is to follow. The delay in the attack on the Suez Canal possibly is due to the fact that the railroad is not yet complete since the Germans are convinced that military operations in the desert are impossible, unless the railway extends as far as the neighborhood of Ismailia on the Canal, 48 miles from Port Said. Meanwhile the British, besides defending the Suez Canal, where they are confident they will be able to repulse the Turko-German attack, have adopted measures insuring the safety of the interior of Egypt. They have prohibited navigation in the Red Sea, which is patrolled by warships. The garrison at Aden has been increased with the object of preventing the Turko-German emissaries from reaching Abyssinia, which the allies have French Somaliland, on the Gulf of Aden, from which the French railroad now reaches Aden, 48 miles by rail from Djibouti.

THE TURKO-GERMAN DRIVE.

ROME, Jan. 14.
The mass of rumors and reports spread of late concerning a contemplated Turko-German drive against Egypt, is believed here to be a veil, actually cast by the Central Powers and their Ottoman Ally, to cover extensive preparations now underway for a concerted gigantic effort in Mesopotamia with the aim of inflicting a crushing defeat upon the British there. Suez and Egypt will not be seriously attacked until this aim is accomplished. The Germans, it is said, are purposely spreading reports about an imminent attack on the Suez Canal, and are pretending that troops have been sent to Syria. Instead, however, the Teuton and Turk are concentrating all their efforts in present Mesopotamia. Reinforcements of troops and enormous quantities of war material, including heavy Austrian artillery, have been sent to Bagdad, which is to be the base for the new drive. Only demoralized stragglers in force are expected against the Suez Canal, while the bulk of the force will be made from Bagdad. A crushing
