Cutting Out Morse

HOW TO REDUCE INTERFERENCE.

Probably 95 per cent. of people using broadcast receivers have, at some time or other, had their enjoyment marred by interference, the most serious source of which is Morse or "code" signals, in the large majority of cases from ships or the coastal telegraph stations communicating with ships.

Far too many receivers use a direct circuit from the aerial; that is to say, the aerial is brought to one side of the tuning coil and the earth to the other. Such a receiver is and always will be unselective; in other words, will respond to a greater or less degree to the signals on other wave lengths than that of the broadcasting station which it is tuned to.

It is recommended always to use a coupled aerial circuit in which a coil tuned either by a condenser in series or parallel is connected in the aerial and earth, and this coil brought near to the usual tuning coil, but not connected by wires or connections to the latter.

This certainly entails one extra adjustment, but its use justifies this owing to the comparative freedom from interference which is given, and in many cases a distinct gain in signal strength will be noted from the broadcasting stations listened to.

If, when using a coupled aerial circuit, interference is still experienced, moving the coil a little farther away from the closed circuit coil and slight readjustment of the controls will, in a large number of cases, entirely eliminate the interference.

For those people who unfortunately live, so to speak, under the shadow of a large coast or commercial station, even this will not give immunity and they are advised to use a wave trap.

What War Debts Mean to Britain

At the bottom of the series of political upheavals that are now taking place in France is finance. Governments come and governments go in that country, but none seem able to evolve a plan whereby the French Republic is able to tax people in such a way as to balance its budget and pay its debts. Travellers returning from France are one in their opinion that everybody in that country is busy. There is apparently work in plenty, while on the other hand Great Britain is suffering from hard times, a scarcity of work, a system of doles that is eating the heart out of the country, and last but not least high taxation.

Not long ago the Federation of British Industries addressed an illuminating document to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pointing out the necessity of Britain collecting her dues from France, Italy and other debtor nations, and it was done in a manner to impress upon the mind of "the man on the street" just what these debts mean to the taxpayers of Britain. For instance, it is pointed out that the British taxpayers are responsible for an income tax in behalf of France to the amount of seven pence in the pound six and one-half pence in behalf of Italy, while nine and one-half pence is being paid in behalf of other debtor nations, or just a shade under two shillings in the pound is being taken from British taxpayers because inter-Ally nations will not or cannot pay their debts.

Add to these sums eight pence half penny, being Britain's annual payments to the United States, and we have a total of fifty-three cents, to express it in our currency, which the British Government must raise from every five dollars to take care of her obligation arising from the war. In other words the British taxpayers are obliged as it now stands to expend one-tenth of their incomes in the payment of interest and liquidation of debts that belong elsewhere.

But this is not all, for the very fact that France, Italy, and other debtor nations are not paying their debts, makes competition between these countries and Britain all the more keen, with the advantages very much on the side of those that do not now feel the necessity of balancing their national books and meeting their obligations.

Atlantic Liner Barely Missed Huge Iceberg

LONDON, May 19.—Passengers on the steamship Aurania, on arriving in Liverpool to-day from Montreal reported having seen a huge iceberg off Cape Race on May 8. The iceberg loomed up suddenly out of a dense fog. It was only 100 or 150 feet from the ship. The Aurania's engines were quickly reversed when the iceberg was sighted.

Mr. Justice Weir, Montreal, was a passenger on the ship. In an interview he said the decks of the vessel were quickly crowded by excited passengers when it became known that an iceberg was in sight, but there was no panic.

"We had been growling at the captain for going dead slow all day," Mr. Justice Weir said, "but we sang another tune after we saw the iceberg." Captain Peel, Commander of the ship, was presented with an address signed by all the passengers, expressing admiration for his caution and discretion, and for the able manner in which he had maneuvered the vessel. The Aurania lost two days on the voyage owing to fog, and on May 8th she covered only 75½ miles.

Coyotes Destroy Sheep

VANCOUVER, B.C.—Sheep men of the British Columbia Interior report severe losses this year as a result of the depredations of coyotes, and trappers are being encouraged to make a more intensive drive on the prowlers. Coyote skins are of no value during the summer and trapping is, therefore, profitable only between the months of November and March, the bounty of $2.00 a head being inadequate to meet the trappers' expenses. Good skins fetch from $9.00 to $16.00 in the market when they are in satisfactory condition and these prices make it well worth while for the trapper to go out. Five months out of twelve, however, is not enough in which to check the increase of the marauders and sheep men are urging the British Columbia Government to increase the bounty so that trappers will find it profitable to seek the coyote at all seasons.
