Vest Pocket Essays By George Fitch

BOOK AGENTS book agent is a leather salesman People who are fond of literature by the store of the book store. It is the duty of the book agent, however, to sell history to men who are interested in baseball, poetry who are interested in basebal, poetry to pool players, romancs to stock brokers with a passion for poker, and encyclopedias to chauffeurs. The book agent does this by fixing a cool grey eye on his victim and talking to him until said victim is convinced that without De Maupassant in 27 volumes life is horrible and useless.

The book agent doesn't necessarily talk about De Maupassant in the operation, because he probably has never read him. He usually talks of politics, the cest of living, the victim's well known taste in art and letters, the desirability of hand-tooled bindings and the number of sets he has sold to our leading men. Whatever he talks of, he ends as follows: "Sign here, please," Then he goes away, and shortly afterwards the huyer wakes up with a start and begins to pay $6 a month, continuing until death does him part.

Book agents rarely carry books with them. They carry covers. No book agent would waste his time reading selections from Kinling when he can preduce with far less trouble selections from green, red, blue and pink bindings. A good book agent can bink bindings. A good book agent can cell three horizontal feet of ivory and old rose bindings of an enthusiast in literature without telling him who wrote the fillings between the covers.

And if the book has a numbered title page and is limited to 999 copies, the plates having been beaten up and fed to a goat afterward, the book agent gan sell it for triple prices.

Book agents are among our most valuable citizens, because they carry literature where only plush furniture and player planos formerly existed, and fill yawning book shelves with symphonies in stamped leather, the contents of which are occasionally read in default of other amusements, by their owners.

BACKBONE OF WINTER.

Ideas of a Plain Man By Dr. Frank Crane

BACKBONE OF WINTER.

The winter seems ended, the soft virtual breezes come up from the Southland, refreshing and sweet; we bid a farewell to the north wind that freezes, we think we are done with the snow and the sleet; and just when we're sure that old winter lies bleeding as dead as the deadest of pertifled men, the wind swings around to the northwest of Sweden, the backbone of winter gets busy again; that fussy old backbone, that the winter backbone gets busy again. We life of our flannels and put them in pawn, and then we're the grip and the jumping pneumony, we furnish a snap for the medical men; they fill us with plant hen we're busy again; that foolish onest of molives, yet he grue shown of understanding and with remedies phoney; the backbone of winter is busy again, that dogasted backbone, that it may be a busy again, it is not asfe to bet that they wind present backbone of winter as the control the wind backbone of winter is busy again, that they wind present backbone of winter as the control the wind backbone, that dedbuated backbone is busy again, that they wind present backbone of winters is busy again, the degasted backbone of winters is busy again, that they wind present backbone of winters is busy again, that they wind present backbone of winters is busy again, that they wind the present of the control of the backbone of winters is busy again, the degasted backbone, that they wind the control of the backbone of winters is busy again, the they wind the wind t THE GENIUS FOR INDIRECTION.
