Don't Expect All the Comforts of Home-Above All, Don't Get Peeved.

We are all thinking about vacations and making plans for the brief respite from work during which we propose to rest and recreate. We may envy those who are bound for Europe, or who will linger through the summer by the sea, or among the mountains, but after all it is best to be glad of what we can get and get as much out of it as possible.

The pleasure of a vacation trip depends as much upon one's companions as upon the place selected for the outing. One grumbling, complaining person is a kill-joy; so also the "sensitive" person whose egotism is wounded unless her preferences are allowed

A party of congenial young people can have a most enjoyable time unless there is a spoil-sport among them. Their pleasures may be very simple, the expense slight, but they will remember the outing as delightful if the party is harmonious.

The requisites of a good travelling companion or "camper" are first and foremost, good temper; next, the disposition to accept the little discomforts that inevitably arise as a matter of course, something to be expected. and endure them patiently and without "fussing." The first thing Evelyn's trembling fingers withdrew from the package was the jeweler's case containing the ring. When the diamonds flashed in the moonlight she uttered a choking cry and her lips trembled pitifully. So this was Arthur Warden's answer to Rosamund Laing's jibes! Without hesitation, without waiting to read a word of the many pages of manuscript that accompanied it, she slipped it on to the engagement finger of her left hand. It did not fit. It was far too large. But what did that matter. Just then she wanted to assure herself that she had gone back to her allegiance before she was vouch-safed a syllable of explanation. It was humility, not pride, that governed her raction.

Peter, however, did not regard the glittering ring with such self-effacement.

His prominent eyes bulged with surprise, and he gripped his son's shoulder emphatically.

"For some time I had been in a low depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this. At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wenderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."
