For the last six she has achieved great success in the metropolis of America. In addition to her work in opera she is also well known as an auditorio singer. Among her operatic successes are the following roles: Amnevis in "Aida"; Ortrud in "Lohengrin"; Brangruane in "Tristan and Isolde"; Laura in "Giacond"; Fricka in "Die Walkure"; and Urbaine in "Les Huguenots."

Madame 'Homer was educated in Philadelphia and after achieving prominence as a church singer and studyminence as a church singer and studying in Boston for some time she completed her studies in Europe under Fidele Koenig for voice culture, and Paul Lehrie for dramatic technique.

Herbert Witherspon, the American
