Sir Charles is emphatic in affirming that in this matter Canada has practically as free a hand and as much of her own way as she could have were she independent and acting for herself alone. We thought that this was so before; but now we have it on official authority. Only one thing do we regret—that curcumstances do not permit of Sir Charles explaining in a speech to the House of Commons, exactly what the practice now is in such a case as that of Canada seeking to make a commercial treaty for herself with a foreign power, Spain, for instance. Their lawyer says that if Detroit refuses to release them they will offer their services to Detroit at the beginning of the season, and then start in to beginning of the season, and then start in to collect salary at last year's rate, suing after the first month in case the Detroits fail to pay. The lawyer believes that they will have a legal claim that the contracts were between these two players and the Detroit management. He says the men cannot be sold like galley slaves to other clubs. Baseball people here think that Detroit would rather release the players than go to the trouble and expense of such litigation. The buying clubs would not now have any interest in backing up the Detroiters, for Boston does not want White now, and Rowe positively will not play in Pittsburgh.
