'I shall not marry,' Lilian said with tears; 'I shall never marry.'

'I am wrong to talk to you like this,' returned Poppy wistfully. 'You ought to marry; Jocelyn being dead, it is right you should seek to find in marriage a home and safety.'

'But he is not dead; how can you tell he is dead?' Lilian said passionately.

'In that little while that we were in the house together, before we went the second time to the Werringtons', he spoke of Spain, and said that there was war there, and that that would suit him. 'And I have no faith in republics,' he said: 'so I think I shal! join Don Carlos.' I did not like to tell you this, Lilian; but I believe that he went, and that he has fallen in battle. The New Potatoe Barrel.—For some time back a good deal of dissatisfaction has been aperienced among farmers in reference to the various barrels, tubs, and other measures, used in measuring potatocs. As a rule, our Island farmers prefer selling their potatoes according to measure, not by weight. The difficulty has been that potatoe buyers not having any legally stamped tub or barrel, were under the necessity of making barrels of their own. These, in many instances, were doubtless correct enough; but it was felt in the interest of all concerned, that a uniform, legally authorized measure should be determined on. The island representatives brought the matter to the notice of the Minister of Inland Revenue last winter, and the Inspector of weights and measures brought the requirements and wants of merchants and tarmers generally. The The Sentinel advises the removal of
