

DESCRIPTION OF THE NEWHOUSE TRAP.

THERE are eight different sizes of the Newhouse Trap, adapted to the capture of all kinds of animals, from the house rat to the grizzly bear.

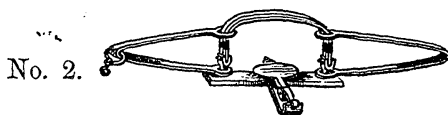

The smallest size having but recently been introduced into the series, is designated as No. 0, and is called the RAT TRAP. It has a single spring, and the jaws spread, when set, three inches and a half. It is designed for the house rat, but is strong enough to hold the muskrat.

No. 1 is called the MUSKRAT TRAP. It has one spring, and the jaws spread four inches. It is adapted to the capture of the mink, marten, and all the smaller fur-bearing animals.

No. 1½ (also recently introduced), is called the MINK TRAP. It has but one spring; and the jaws spread four inches and seven-eighths. It is strong enough for the fox or fisher.

No. 2 is called the FOX TRAP. It has two springs, and the jaws spread four inches and seven-eighths. It is strong
