Dr. RYCKMAN says in the Guardian :—

..... It fires me up wonderfully for the temperance conflict, if I may express my own sensations. It makes me hear the booming of big guns, and the rattle of musketry, and the martial music which is so inspiring to the soldier. It helps to “ Equip me for the war,

And teach my hands to fight.”

There is, perhaps, not a phase of the whiskey iniquity which is not admirably hit by some of these paper missiles. In some conflicts paper “shot and shell” do far better execution than lead or iron. “Metal in type is mightier than metal in bullets.” If it were in our Sunday-school libraries, no book would be more frequently read. The young orators of our schools and homes will find in it pieces most suitable for recitation.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS :

“Our friend, Mr. Rogers, has done his work well, and we commend his volume to all.”
—Episcopal Methodist.

“This little book ought to do good service to the Temperance cause. It comprises anecdotes, songs, exhortations, and stirring appeals.”—Daily Globe.

“It is well adapted to instruct and arouse the public in regard to this great practical question.”—Guardian.

“The original matter is well written and to the point; and the selections and contributions are exceptionally good.”—Georgetown Herald.
