The day was fine though rather windy for to make clear shooting. The Prince of Wales Rifles set the example last year of throwing open one of their matches, and this year the other regiments in Montreal have followed their example. To show how well this is appreciated, the Prince of Wales Rifles had 60 competitors this year in their open match. The Cup presented by Lieut Colonel Bond, is a handsome silver vase, 18 inches in height, and has to be won twice before becoming the property of the winner. Last year it was won by Sgt. Quinn. Capt. Mudge acted as Executive officer, and at the close of the meeting presented the prizes.

REVIEWS.

Professor Glover, so well known as the Editor of Moore's Irish Melodies, has composed a cantata in two parts, containing 31 pieces, the theme being on the introduction of Christianity into Ireland; the cantata is entitled "St. Patrick at Tara." It would hardly be possible to find a more striking or sublime subject than the one chosen. The time, the beginning of the fifth century, when the throne of the Caesar's was being fought for by Western and Eastern barbarians, when the great Roman Empire was tottering to its fall, and the civilization it had created, undergoing rapid dissolution. The unknown and obscure monk with that faith and inspiration that distinguished the Great Apostle of the Gentiles; ventures amongst barbarians, the fiercest and most unconquerable of the Western tribes professing a stern and bloody superstition that Roman civilization or arms were powerless to reach, and placing both almost without opposition under the genial merciful and civilizing influence of Christianity.

Professor Glover has handled this noble subject with rare skill. Our space will only allow us to give one or two selections.

NO. 3 AIRA

I often wish this trembling lyre
This warbler of my soul's desire,
Would raise the breath of song sublime
To heroes bold of former time;
But when the soaring theme I try,
Along the chords my numbers die,
Then fare thee well seductive strain;
Henceforth I follow glory's theme,
From thou my lyre and thou my heart
Shall never more in spirit part.

NO 5 ARIA.

Give me that strain of mournful touch,
I used to love long, long ago,
Before this heart had known as much,
As now alas, it bleeds to know;
Sweet notes they toll of former peace,
Of all that looked so smiling then,
Now vanished, lost—O pray thee cease,
I cannot bear those sounds again.

This is called the song of the King and is, striking specimen of the beauties of the composition.

No. 10, Entry of the Hunters. Ancient Irish Melody (introduced.)

Song of Innisfall.

They came from a land beyond the sea, and now on the Western Main,
Set sail in their good ships gallantly from the sunny land of Spain,
Oh! where's the Isle we've seen in dreams or destined homo or gravo;
Thus sung they as by the morning beams, they swept the Atlantic wave,
And lo where afar o'er the Ocean shines a sparkle of radiant green,
As though in that deep lay emerald mines whose light through the waves were seen:
'Tis Innisfall—'tis Innisfall! rings o'er the echoing sea.
While bending to heaven, the warriors hail that home of the brave and free.
