

S E C T. XVIII.

Containing an Account of our Passage from China to England in the Cadogan East-India-Man Commanded by Captain John Hill.

 T was not in our power to give any description worth the while of the City of Canton, its river or the country about it, any more than of what might be said and observ'd of its inhabitants.

All that I propose to myself for the remainder, is to conduct my reader home, after having led him round so large a portion of the earth's circumference, through so many different climates, and a series of such unfortunate occurrences.

Towards the latter end of December, I sail'd in the Cadogan, commanded by captain ^{Departure} ^{from Canton}
^{in China.}
John Hill, in company with the Frances, captain Newsham, who sailing better than we, left us as soon as we were out to sea.
